Major cocaine raid nabs 11

Victoria undercover work pays off

By DEREK SIDENIUS

An RCMP and municipal police task force of more than 50 officers hit at least 20 homes in Greater Victoria area this morning in a major crackdown on cocaine trafficking.

The task force held warrants for the arrest of 35 persons on charges of trafficking in cocaine, LSD, methamphetamine, marijuana, hashish oil and an assortment of pharmaceutical drugs.

The raids culminated a six-month undercover operation carried out by a 23-year-old RCMP constable from outside B.C.

The raids involved homes in areas ranging from Central Saanich to the Western Community and one or two Oak Bay residences.

By noon, 11 suspects had been rounded up in Victoria and five more persons — two of them Victoria residents — had been taken into custody in the Vancouver area.

The Vancouver arrests followed a curbside deal in which the undercover agent purchased a pound of cocaine worth $50,000.

But the drug when cut and sold in the underworld would increase in value to at least $100,000.

A wide variety of drugs was seized in Victoria but the kind and amount were not immediately known.

Superintendent Ed Trefry, head of the Victoria RCMP sub-division, said the operation was set up to dry up the cocaine supply in the Victoria area.

He said the trade had reached "alarming levels".

"The operation was put together after assessing the activity in this area. It was ripe for an undercover approach with the ultimate goal of drying up the supplies," Trefry said.

He said the warrants covered what he called low-level traffickers, mostly cash street dealers.

The undercover agent arrived in Victoria last October and infiltrated trafficking circles.

During the operation, he bought hashish oil, marijuana and soft drugs but his main target was cocaine.

Trefry said the undercover RCMP agent spent $22,500 buying drugs to help set up today's raids.

Trefry said the 50 officers included members of the Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich forces.

The raiding parties — split into 12 teams — gathered at RCMP headquarters about 7 a.m. today.

The raids were to have taken place at that time but there was a delay in Vancouver and they did not start until about 9.30 a.m.

The undercover officer made the large cocaine purchase on a Vancouver street about 10.30 a.m.

Trefry said the deal was to have been made in a hotel room but the suspects moved around and the buy was finally made from a car window.

The arrests were continuing today and all of the suspects are to appear in court later.

Police do not believe that the trafficking operation was part of a larger criminal organization.

"What we got is a collection of traffickers," Trefry said.

He said the arrests made today involved no problems.

"It's anticipated they will have a significant impact in this area," Trefrey told the Times.

GOING, GOING . . . The Quebec registered freighter Maurice Desgagnes rolls on her side and starts to slide under the storm-tossed Atlantic Ocean off Nova Scotia shortly after her 21 crewmembers were rescued. The seamen were taken off the ship by helicopters from the Canadian destroyer Huron. The ship had been carrying a cargo of railway ties which shifted in the storm, causing the ship to start taking water.

'To hell with the people' on camping fee hike

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

An organization of private B.C. resort and campground owners pressured the government into increasing provincial campsite fees to lessen competition, according to the editor of B.C. Outdoors.

Editor Donald Stainsby told the Times Wednesday he obtained a copy of a B.C. Motels, Resorts and Trailer Parks Association newsletter taking credit for recent provincial campsite fee increases of 25 and 50 per cent and more.

An association committee working on pricing of provincial campgrounds made a "major breakthrough" by convincing the government to raise the rates of all campgrounds, the newsletter states:

"Many of the campgrounds which were free last summer will be $5 in 1980. Also, all the $4 parks will be $5 with the remainder, about one-third of the goverment campgrounds, increased from $2 to $3," the letter says.

"This major breakthrough will assist all operators in the months to come."

It also states the government has agreed to consider collecting fees in any area where it will help neighboring private operators.

"If you have a government park nearby, be sure to let us know so we can put it on our list for the April meeting," the newsletter advises.

Lands, Parks and Housing Minister Jim Chabot and trailer park association manager Bud Carey were not available for comment at press time.

Stainsby said he is angry with Chabot for bowing to pressure groups and for misrepresenting the reason for the increase.

Higher year-round fees were announced recently by Chabot, who said they are necessary because of increased costs and will mean better service.

"It seems to me they (the motel association) finally got a minister in there who was willing to go along with them and to hell with the people," Stainsby said.

He said the increases are outrageous and not modest, as Chabot promised.

Stainsby said the minister also forgot to mention that fees would be established in a number of campsites which were free last year.

Low-cost provincial campgrounds are paid for with tax dollars, Stainsby pointed out, and provide inexpensive holidays for people who cannot afford any other kind of vacation.

Hardest hit by the increases are old-age pensioners, single parents, low-income families, and organizations that struggle all year to take groups of underprivileged kids out camping.

Resorts and campgrounds are more expensive and owners probably asked for the fee increases because they view low-rate provincial resorts as unfair competition, Stainsby said.

"Nobody in their right minds would go to a private campground for the night.

"You're usually four feet from other campers, stuck there like pigs for dinner."

Ford wins Pinto fire case

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) — A jury today acquitted Ford Motor Co. on three counts of reckless homicide in the deaths of three Indiana teenagers burned to death when their Pinto sedan was hit from behind.

Prosecutor Michael Cosentino and defence lawyer James Neal sat exressionless as the judge read the contents of the three envelopes containing the verdicts.

When asked if either lawyer wished to poll the panel, Cosentino replied quietly: "No your honor." Neal agreed.

The verdict was read before a packed courtroom that included more than 150 townspeople, reporters and members of the lawyers staff.

The jury's decision came in its fourth day of deliberations.

Earlier in the day, Circuit Judge Harold Staffeldt told jurors to work "until further order of the court."

The automaker was charged with three counts of reckless homicide in the 1978 deaths of three teenage women whose 1973 Pinto exploded when struck from behind by a van.

Budget boo-boo raised false hope

A budget boo-boo has dashed the hopes of some 30,000 veterans who expected an extra $50 on their homeowner grant.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis's new budget states: "The homeowner grant will be increased by a further $50, to $630, for the elderly, the handicapped now receiving GAIN and war veterans."

What it should have said was: "war veterans receiving the veterans allowance."

There are about 40,000 war veterans in B.C. who had their hopes raised.

But only 10,000 of them actually qualify.

The Veterans Services Office in the federal building on Government Street has received "a lot of calls" on the subject.

Curtis is expected to present a budget amendment in the legislature, to correct the impression that all war veterans will get the extra grant.

It will be one more thing for the opposition to be unkind about.

Merchants on edge over Maggie fallout

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria businessmen who depend heavily on the throngs of tourists brought by the Princess Marguerite every summer are starting to worry about how her replacement will affect business this year.

"It's a very distressing situation," Gerry Parker, manager of the Downtown Victoria Association, said today.

Eaton's manager Reg Hind said his department store definitely will lose business if the Queen of Prince Rupert goes on the Victoria-Seattle run as announced.

"It's bound to have an effect. We feel definitely there will be a loss because of a loss of exposure," added Hind.

"It's a concern to everybody, the entire city, especially the downtown area because we benefit directly," Mrs. Parker said.

She said downtown businessmen have heard rumors that the Rupert won't be ready by the announced May 15 startup date but so far they're only rumors.

"Whether they'll have the boat ready in time, I've heard no comments on that," Hind said.

There have been unconfirmed reports that the vessel may not be ready until mid-June or even July.

Mrs. Parker and Ed Higgin, president of the Visitors Information Centre, said Victoria businesses still don't have any hard facts from the government about the proposed schedule or carrying capacity of the Queen of Prince Rupert.

"You sort of have to feel they know what they're doing," she said.

Burrard-Yarrows shipyard, which is going to carry out the refit, said today the B.C. Ferry Corp. vessel is due to sail into drydock April 7.

The work is supposed to be finished May 12 to enable her to make her first run by May 15.

Higgin said his organization's members have a number of concerns, mostly about the carrying capacity of the new vessel and how long the schedule will allow them to stay in the city.

"Those are our concerns

Bank rate floats to 14.19

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The new Bank of Canada rate is 14.19 per cent, up from the previous rate of 14 per cent, the central bank announced today.

The rate, the first set under the bank's new floating rate system, is fixed at one-quarter of one percentage point above the average interest on tenders for 91-day treasury bills. The average at today's auction was 13.94 per cent.

And a further increase in the Canadian bank rate looks likely next week because Chase Manhattan Bank, the third largest bank in the United States, today raised its prime lending rate by a half a percentage point to a record 18¼ per cent, and several other U.S. banks followed suit.

Bank of Canada Governor Gerald Bouey, in announcing the new floating-prime policy earlier in the week, said the Canadian dollar had been under rising pressure because of higher U.S. interest rates.

Today's new bank rate was immediately labelled "a very serious mistake" by New Democratic finance critic Bob Rae.

There was no significant reaction to the new rate on the Toronto market today.

Prices for mid- and long-term provincial bond issues gained one-quarter of a point in active trading on the Canadian bond market, following a mildly bullish trend at New York. The short end of the market remained unchanged as did prices for corporate issues.

Analysts said Canadian bond investors were sitting tight.

A night in Wash. jail for speedy B.C. driver

COQUITLAM (CP) — Canadian motorists who get caught speeding in Washington state may find themselves experiencing American hospitality from a new perspective.

Ian McLaine of Port Coquitlam left home on the evening of March 5, heading south for a job interview in Seattle. But when the appointment time arrived, McLaine was sharing a jail cell with a convicted murderer.

McLaine was caught speeding by a state patrol officer north of Everett, but instead of being given a speeding ticket, he was charged with reckless driving — the state's most serious traffic offence short of impaired driving.

Motorists caught travelling 16 kilometres an hour over the speed limit normally are given a citation and required to post a $30 bail bond.

The bail gradually increases with the amount the speed limit has been exceeded, to a high of $238 for exceeding the limit by 80 km/h an hour.

However, motorists caught driving faster than 144 km/h usually are charged with reckless driving, which requires the driver to post $250 bail. The charge carries a maximum penalty of $500 and 60 days in jail.

McLaine said Wednesday his car won't even go 144 km/h.

He said the patrolman took his driver's licence and told him he was being arrested. He was told to lock his car, frisked, handcuffed and put in the back seat of the police cruiser.

McLaine said he was taken to the Everett courthouse, told to remove all his personal property, asked some questions in front of what he thought to be a lie detector and later given 15 cents to [illegible] post his $250 bond.

The bondsman refused to post the bond and McLaine asked for permission to call home, but was told he'd already used his one call.

He was asked to change into prison clothing and was put in a cell with a man who claimed to be awaiting transfer to Washington State Penitentiary at Walla Walla to serve a murder sentence.

In the morning McLaine was driven to Arlington, where he appeared in court and was fined $300 for reckless driving and given a release form allowing him two weeks to pay.

He was driven back to Everett and forced to wait another two hours before his release application was [illegible]id.

"It was a really frightful experience. I think other people in Canada should be made aware of a situation like that."

Sgt. Al Beckstrom of the Everett detachment of the state patrol said most Canadians caught speeding on Interstate 5 are usually given a speeding citation, but he admitted that reckless driving charges are regularly laid for excessive speeders.

"Frequent violators of our speed limits are Canadians," he said. "They like to roll."

Inflation rate decreases slightly in February

OTTAWA (CP) — Higher food, clothing and housing prices helped drive consumer prices up 0.8 per cent in February from January, Statistics Canada reported today.

The latest figures dampen the inflation rate for the 12 months ending in February to 9.4 per cent, from 9.5 per cent in the year ending in January.

Statistics Canada, which measures changes in the cost of a basket of commonly-purchased goods and services, says higher prices for beef, sugar and confections, rented and owned housing and for items of men's and women's clothing, were mainly responsible for the monthly increase in consumer prices.

Prices for all items excluding food rose 0.8 per cent from January; food prices jumped 1.4 per cent.

As a result, the consumer price index for all items stood at 201.8 for February, up from 200.1 in January and from 184.4 a year earlier.

That means that the standard basket of goods and services which cost $100 in 1971 — the year the index base was set at 100 — now costs $201.80.

The purchasing power of a 1971 dollar in February was 50 cents, unchanged from January, but down from 54 cents a year ago.

Pork and fresh vegetable prices declined slightly during February.

The highest monthly increase was two per cent for clothing, bringing the rise from a year earlier to 12.3 per cent. Food and tobacco and alcohol were next with a monthly increase of 1.4 per cent, putting the rise in food costs at 10.1 per cent from February, 1979, and that for tobacco and alcohol at 9.9 per cent.

Canada's inflation rate is well below that of 18 per cent in the United States, but the rate there contains continuing soaring oil prices which Canadians still have to face. Retail gasoline prices in the U.S. rose 7.4 per cent in February from January, the largest one-month increase on record.

In Paris, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) Wednesday reported a 1.5-per-cent increase in inflation in non-Communist industrial countries in January and experts said the movement of prices during the month looked equally disquieting.

The January rise in consumer prices matched a record for the 24 OECD countries set in February of 1974, during the oil price explosion that followed the October War in the Middle East.

Informed sources said indications were for another steep rise in February, certainly above one per cent and possibly as high as 1.5 per cent again.

The OECD listed these increases for individual countries in January: Canada 0.6 per cent; United States 1.4, Japan 0.9, West Germany 0.5, France 1.9, Britain 2.5.

Kurdistan clean up bill given to tanker owners

HALIFAX (CP) — The Canadian Coast Guard has formally served the owners and insurers of the British tanker Kurdistan with a bill for $6.9 million.

The bill is for the federal costs involved during the tanker's breakup March 15, 1979, and the following cleanup operations.

The coast guard said in a statement Wednesday Regional Director Ken Curren has delivered the claim to the lawyer representing the ship's owners and underwriters.

Notice of claim has also been filed with the fund established by tanker owners and operators with respect to oil pollution and a similar fund established by the oil companies.

Canada's Maritime Pollution Claims Fund also has been notified.

When the Kurdistan broke up in the Cabot Strait, more than 7,000 tons of bunker oil were spilled.

The bow of the ship was towed to sea and destroyed by the HMCS Margaree and a defence department diving team to avoid further pollution. The stern was salvaged.

More than 500 permanent and temporary coast guard staff, in conjunction with the department of environment and provincial agencies, took part in the six-month cleanup operation.

Oil and debris were removed from 1,226 kilometres of shoreline in Nova Scotia and 100 kilometres in Newfoundland.

Within a week, he said tourist operators hope to have some concrete facts.

"The only people that have any solid information are the government," he added.

"I've had many, many expressions of concern," Higgin said, but they're based on rumors and unconfirmed reports.

"How can we deal with just rumors? We cannot."

Meanwhile, Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber said the government may be punishing the city for voting Socialist with its plans to scrap the Princess Marguerite and replace her with the Rupert.

"You have to wonder about the political motives. This latest move lacks all political support in Victoria. There isn't one vote in it for the Socreds," said Barber.

"So if they're not doing it for positive political reasons, one wonders whether they're doing it for negative political reasons. Apart from that, it makes no sense whatsoever."

Premier Bill Bennett was presented Wednesday with a 42,000-name save-the-Marguerite petition promoted by CFAX, Victoria but stated the government will not change its position.

A curious sidelight to the petition is that one year ago, CFAX manager Mel Cooper — then president of the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce — stated the Marguerite should be replaced by a suitable vessel.

Transportation Minister Alex Fraser, who led a score of reporters on a tour through the bowels of the Maggie Wednesday, was taken aback by a Times report quoting a Coast Guard spokesman as saying if the Marguerite has safety problems, so do most of the ships in the B.C. Ferry fleet.

"I have no response to that. I don't know what all that's about," he said.

Nevertheless he, too, remained adamant.

The Marguerite will not sail because "the professionals say it isn't safe to run."

Cruise ship world's dearest

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A Danish shipping company announced Wednesday it is building the world's most expensive luxury cruise ship.

The as yet unnamed 20,000-ton, 183-metre-long ship is to be built by Copenhagen's DFDS group at a shipyard in France, and will cost $100 million.

It will accommodate 1,600 passengers and 400 cars, use the most fuel-efficient engines available, and have casinos, nightclubs, and duty-free shops on board for the 2½-day trip between New York and the Bahamas.

DFDS will also operate a smaller luxury ship for daily ferry service between Miami and the Bahamas so that passengers on the larger ship can take their cars with them on the longer trip and then travel on to Florida and drive home.

Peter Goldmark, the executive-director of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, said Wednesday the ship will make 72 trips a year between New York and the Bahamas starting in July of 1982, will increase the number of ship passengers visiting New York by 40 per cent a year.

Soviets to make contact lenses

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Contact lenses, long considered an unattainable Western luxury by Soviet spectacle-wearers, are to be produced in the Soviet Union for the first time. A Soviet newspaper says that a West German-equipped factory in the Ukrainian town of Izyum will go into operation soon with the capacity to produce 120,000 plastic lenses and 48,000 glass ones.

B.C. house builders driven out

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia real estate brokers are worried about the future of the housebuilding industry in the province.

More builders are quitting the industry because rising labor, land and material costs leave them with no profits.

"There's a continuing trend for builders to move out of housebuilding completely," said R.J. Borrie, executive director of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, Pacific region.

"Few builders will construct on the chance they'll sell what they build. Most now work only under contract."

Rising costs and lack of government tax incentives are given as two major reasons.

"Between December and January, costs of installing electrical wiring in a new house shot up 10 per cent," Borrie said.

"Plumbing costs rose seven per cent. The over-all increase in labor and material costs in those two months was 2,3 per cent.

"In June, B.C. construction trade unions are due to renegotiate labor contracts. The over-all (proposed) package is for a 30-per-cent increase."

George Yen, president of the B.C. Real Estate Association, said high mortgage rates have distorted the usual stable pattern of house buying.

"October and November sales were quiet, but then suddenly there was a rush in January and December, normally quiet months," Yen said.

The rush to buy has been maintained, despite rising mortgage interest rates.

Western messiah has tarnished halo

REGINA — Perhaps some day the quitters who talk of western seperatism will find a credible spokesman, someone who is not regarded as a flake.

For now, though, they will have to put up with such messiahs as Dick Collver, who became a one-day wonder here Wednesday with his stirring call for western Canada to jump into bed with Uncle Sam.

The deteriorating reputation of Collver took another dip when he announced he is leaving the Conservative Party he once led to sit in the Saskatchewan Legislature as an independent — while he fuels his lone rocket.

The Feb. 18 election, he announced, made it clear that the Canadian union is unworkable. The solution, apparently, is to hand over all the resources and water of western Canada to the energy-hungry Americans.

Called a bubblehead

The feeling of a number of us was adequately expressed by the Regina radio station open-line caller on Wednesday morning who said Mr. Collver was "a bubblehead."

A stocky, good-looking 44-year-old wheeler-dealer who could pass as Frank Gifford's younger brother, he is almost solely responsible for the revival of the Tory party in Saskatchewan. In reviving it, he killed off the Liberals.

Starting in 1973 (just as Peter Lougheed had done earlier in Alberta) he chased across the province pumping blood and his own frenetic energy into the moribund party.

Thanks to him, Tories are now the opposition to Allan Blakeney's NDP and he had a serious chance of becoming premier in the 1978 election.

Since then, the boy wonder who used to boast in the Regina press gallery of how much money he had made in previous months, has begun to slip.

His myriad financial deals seemed to end in legal squabbles too often for the public taste. The Swiss bank account was, yes, connected to his daughter's entry into a school in Switzerland.

His second home in Arizona, where he has substantial land holdings, made him even more a fan of the buccaneering brand of Americans.

In the end, Saskatchewan voters came to conclude that the impatient and ambitious young man (he was born in Toronto and came to Saskatchewan laterally from Calgary) was a trifle too flamboyant in his personal matters for what they wanted in the premier's chair.

Just four months ago, he stepped down as Tory leader, passing that post to Grant Devine, who does not have a seat. The moody Collver retained his seat as the Conservative member for Nipawin.

He also retained his reputation. He was up in court several weeks back, pleading guilty to discharging his .357 Magnum off his townhouse balcony on the day of his resignation while somewhat distracted by liquid emotion.

He is still involved in a $1 million lawsuit with the Saskatchewan government in an insurance dispute.

His strange new venture is the first time the Russians have entered the Canadian Confederation debate. His pronouncement declared that he had to rule out the option of an independent western Canada:

"Unfortunately, world events demand that those of us who believe in individual freedom and liberty must unite in the common cause against ever-increasing Russian domination of the world. Balkanization will only invite weakness and subversive activity designed to thwart freedom-loving peoples."

Just as Gerald Ford once freed Poland, Dick Collver has introduced the Kremlin to federal-provincial relations.

A little naked humor

I chased him about town yesterday, suggesting that if this publicity caper failed, he might try the World Nudist Movement. He wasn't amused.

A little snooping revealed that Joe Clark has a lot to answer for. Collver, it seems, wanted a prestigious federal appointment, perhaps the Senate, when he stepped down four months ago and his spiritual leaders still reigned in Ottawa before stepping on their tongues.

Alas, it didn't come in time before the fatal night of Dec. 13 and now Clark is out, Collver is out in the cold, and Arizona, via Moscow, beckons.

The bubblehead is suffering from stunted ambition.

Coal exploration booms on Island

VANCOUVER (CP) — Interest in coal exploration on Vancouver Island has increased dramatically in the last year, with thousands of square kilometres covered by recent licence applications.

The ministry of energy, mines and petroleum resources now is swamped with about 300 applications for exploration licenees covering 69,000 hectares. It already has issued 42 licences covering 8,785 hectares.

Paul Hagen of the mines ministry says there was a moratorium on the issuing of coal licences until February, 1978, so there was a surge of interest when the moratorium was lifted.

"But it's really been in the last year that the increase in activity has been dramatic," he said. "This is a time-consuming business, but I hope we'll be able to process most of these 300 applications by the end of this year."

Alex Matheson of the mines ministry said the licence applications are concentrated in an area between Nanaimo and Campbell River, with other small areas just east of Port Hardy and near Port Alberni.

Matheson said serious exploration has not yet started and the only proven coal reserves on the island so far are near Campbell River.

In that area, Weldwood of Canada Ltd. and Alberta-based Luscar Ltd. are considering a joint venture with a thermal coal strip mine that would have an annual production of about one million short tons.

McKitka faces Kitimat charges

SURREY (CP) — Former Surrey mayor Ed McKitka, convicted last week of seven charges related to municipal land dealings, is wanted in Kitimat on charges of common assault, failure to appear in court and possession of a dangerous weapon.

Kitimat Crown prosecutors said Wednesday they called RCMP here to remind them a warrant was issued for McKitka's arrest Feb. 21, after he failed to appear for trial there.

On Feb. 21, McKitka was on trial here and was later convicted on seven charges.

The charges filed in Kitimat were lodged by Terry Gresl who told RCMP he was hit on the head and threatened with a knife during an incident at a go-cart track there last year.

In Surrey, McKitka was found guilty of two counts of demanding a benefit, one count of using threats or deceit to influence an alderman and four counts of breach of trust and is to be sentenced Friday.

Nanaimo barking up wrong tree

NANAIMO (CP) — Aldermen here thought they had licked the age-old problem of dogs howling in the middle of the night.

They passed a bylaw last week giving bylaw enforcement officers the right to enter residences to pick up offending dogs.

But council's lawyer now says council members could end up in court if the bylaw is enforced.

J. Galt Wilson told a committee studying the problem Wednesday that aldermen could be found guilty of counselling a crime if the bylaw officers start walking into homes.

The committee now is looking for another solution.

Malicious lawsuit backfires

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tow truck driver was ordered in B.C. Supreme Court Wednesday to pay $5,000 in damages to a man he maliciously prosecuted.

A civil jury found that driver Duncan Washtock of Burnaby had assaulted and maliciously prosecuted Steven Gibson, also of Burnaby.

Gibson sued Washtock, his company, Westburn services Ltd., Buster's Towing and two other drivers in connection with the incident in July 1974.

Gibson said Washtock assaulted him and then made a complaint to police accusing Gibson of criminal negligence and failing to remain at an accident scene.

Political economics

Of one thing there is little doubt. If the government of Canada or the Bank of Canada anticipated a drop in interest rates in the near future, there would have been no change in the method by which the prime rate is set. No politician would pass up the opportunity to be associated with a decline in the cost of borrowing money.

And because of that, those seeking and renewing mortgages or financing any purchase have no reason to be optimistic that the Bank of Canada's decision to 'float' the prime rate will reduce interest charges.

Although many economists and money market analysts believed an increase in the prime rate was inevitable because of the 2.75 per cent spread between Canadian and the United States rates, this move has effectively dissociated the government, and even the Bank of Canada to a degree, from future fluctuations in the prime rate.

By setting the prime rate at one quarter of one per cent above the treasury bill rate and letting it float on a week to week basis, the market place will now set the prime rate. Since interest rates on consumer loans and mortgages have retained a historic relationship at one or two percentage points above prime, charges for loans and mortgages will also be set by market demand for treasury bills, not by the Bank of Canada, nor the government.

The treasury bill rate is set by auction. The federal government sells treasury bills — or bonds — by tender every Thursday to raise part of its cash needs, Most mature in 91 or 182 days. The charter banks and a few major investment dealers are the biggest customers, bidding against each other to purchase the bonds. The accepted bids on 91-day bills will now determine the prime rate.

In recent weeks the 91-day treasury bill rate has fluctuated minimally in the range of 13.75 per cent. Adding one-quarter of one per cent to that, brings the prime rate to about 14 per cent, the level it has maintained since October 25.

However, economic circumstances in Canada and the United States indicate that the pressure has been growing on the Bank of Canada and the federal government to raise the prime rate to lessen the gap between the Canadian and U.S. rate. In the past, both government ministers and the Governor of the Bank of Canada have argued that Canada couldn't afford a loss of investment capital that would move south to capitalize on higher American interest rates.

As inflation, in the United States nudges 18 per cent, Canadian economists believe serious upward pressure on this country's 9.5 per cent inflation rate can't be far behind. The major inflation-fighting tool used by both Canada and the U.S. is to raise the prime rate and lessen consumer demand for money.

Circumstances which in the past have resulted in a prime rate increase are more pressing today. The difference now is that the government can plead innocent and blame a prime rate increase on the cold and impersonal realities of the market place.

The Bank of Canada can enter a reserve bid on treasury bills to prevent a rapid rise in the interest rates. But that is small consolation for a decision based more on political than economic sense.

Eggs in one basket

This year's herring season couldn't have worked out better for the fish stocks or the Greenpeace Foundation.

Even if the west coast environmental group had proceeded with plans to disrupt the fishery to protect herring stocks, there would have been few fishermen to harass. And although fish schools on the way to inshore spawning grounds remain relatively unmolested because of the strike by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, the west coast fishing industry as a whole is hurting. The landed value of last year's catch was $120 million. Mid-way through this season the catch has been worth $7 million.

But the industry isn't suffering totally from a typical managment-union dispute. Part of the problem lies with the fact herring roe is a one-market industry. Japan exercises a tremendous influence.

The Japanese custom that demands herring eggs at festive times has lined the pockets of fishermen with millions of dollars for two years in a row. Prices last year escalated on the fishing grounds to 400 and 500 per cent of the prices negotiated by the union and industry. This year the market has taken a tumble and prices offered fishermen are only about 15 per cent of last year's high.

When prices were on the rise two years ago, a few federal fisheries department economists warned of a potential danger of market manipulation by two or three of the major Japanese importing firms. Because of their size and financial resources they virtually had the power to control the fishery through herring prices.

Few fishermen listened, but as a result the fisheries department tried to promote a winter food herring fishery. The product brought less money, but there was the possibility of marketing the herring in many European countries.

The idea was to eliminate danger inherent in having all one's herring eggs in a single Japanese basket. As this year's roe-herring fishery has demonstrated, it is a idea worth further pursuit.

JAMES RESTON

Kissinger twists Ford's arm

WASHINGTON — Henry Kissinger's decision to back Gerald Ford publicly for the Republican presidential nomination was just the opening shot in what promises to be a major campaign battle over the nation's foreign policy.

He made the move for two reasons: first, he believes President Carter's foreign policy has become so incoherent that it is losing the confidence of our allies. And second, he does not think Ronald Reagan can win the election, or provide the energy and ability essential in the presidency if he did win.

Equally important, Kissinger thinks there is now such a crisis of confidence abroad in the conduct of U.S. economic and overseas policy that it would be difficult for Carter to establish an effective working relationship in Europe, the Middle East or with the Soviets if he were to be elected for a second term.

Serious charge

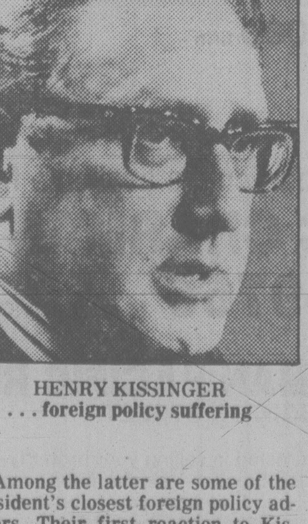
This is the most serious indictment heard from Kissinger about any administration in recent years, and since he intends to expand on it later in the campaign, the outlook is for a foreign affairs debate almost as sharp, and probably more personal, than the economic debate now dividing the two major political parties.

Kissinger made his move at this time partly because he wanted to encourage Ford to enter the primary elections before it's too late, but it's not likely he would have done so without being reasonably sure that Ford was willing to run. For by siding with Ford, he has infuriated Reagan, George Bush and John Anderson and minimized the chances that they would ever nominate him to be secretary of state — an ambition that no doubt occasionally crosses his mind.

With Ford in Washington this week to study the convention delegate count after the Florida, Georgia and Alabama primaries and estimate his chances in the state elections still to come, Republican leaders are still divided on the political effect of a Ford candidacy.

On the whole, they seem to agree with the latest ABC-Harris poll which indicates, as of now, that Ford could beat both Reagan and Carter, but they fear that a repetition of Ford's narrow victory over Reagan this year would split the Republican Party and re-elect Carter. This is not precisely what Ford and Kissinger have in mind.

There are other problems in a Ford candidacy prominently backed by his former secretary of state, for while nobody is mad at Ford, Kissinger would bring to the campaign not only many friends and admirers but many enemies as well.



HENRY KISSINGER
. . . foreign policy suffering

Among the latter are some of the president's closest foreign policy advisers. Their first reaction to Kissinger's support of Ford was that "Henry's vanity is showing." They say it would be "interesting" to debate foreign policy with him, particularly since they are in possession of many transcripts of his conversations with the shah of Iran and his negotiations with the Soviets and the contending parties in the Arab-Israeli disputes.

At the same time, they are aware of his influence both at home and abroad. He has kept in touch with many of the leaders of the major nations since leaving office, and it may be significant that they hesitated to attack him throughout the long strategic arms limitation treaty debate in the Senate, precisely because they feared he had enough support in the Senate and the country to defeat the treaty if he opposed its ratification.

That moratorium on criticism, respected with exceptions on both sides, is now over. Kissinger has been appalled by Carter's inconsistencies, his exaggerations over the Soviet actions in Cuba and Afghanistan, his "meaningless doctrines," his shifts of policy on the neutron bomb and the reduction of U.S. forces in Korea, and his backing and filling on Israeli and Middle East policy at the U.N.

Command respect

Kissinger sees the independent actions of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France in the Middle East, of Chancellor Schmidt of West Germany in the Afghan crisis, of rising criticism of the U.S. in Israel and the Arab states, the rejection of U.S. aid in Pakistan, and even the frayed personal relations between Carter and President Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico as evidence of a lack of leadership in Washington and a loosening of ties with the allies in general.

His view is that Ford has a better chance than Carter to repair this damage abroad and in Congress in the next four years, and that the time will come after the election to reappraise the nation's vital interests and re-establish a long range nonpartisan foreign policy that will command the respect of the American people and our allies and adversaries.

The paradox of this, of course, is that a sharp personal debate for the rest of the campaign is likely to paralyze effective U.S. foreign policy until after the presidential inauguration next January. These were just some of the problems facing Ford when he returned to Washington to calculate his chances and responsibilities this week.

Theatre history

Famous Players' plans to demolish the Capital Theatre, with the blessing of the city planning commission, puts the lie to the image of a city trail-blazing the path in heritage preservation.

Nary a whisper has been heard in the defence of a sound structure, architecturally unique, that is the last movie house in Victoria remaining in its original 'grand style.' The Royal was not built specifically for movies, nor was the MacPherson; all others, The Savoy, the Variety, have disappeared or had their interiors remodelled out of existence.

The Capital opened, as a silent movie house, on Sept. 8, 1921, only two years after the formation of Famous Players Can. Corp. It was the last link in a Canada-wide chain of Capital Theatres and it consolidated Famous Players' reputation for building magnificent theatres.

Designed in the Italian Renaissance style by J. M. Jeffray and G. Rider Morris, it boasted an illuminated fountain in the marble entrance; art glass windows and fixtures executed by Wm. O'Neil of Victoria. Decorative work on ceilings and walls and the art plastering was done by a Seattle firm. The venerable local firm of Luney Bros. was the general contractor. The Hudson's Bay Co. provided the furnishings and the ornamented main curtain. The Capital Orchestra accompanied the silent films of the day, until June 1, 1929, when sound equipment was intalled.

In the early '30s The Crimson Paradise had its world premiere at the Capital. Filmed in Victoria, one of its stars was Kathleen Dunsmuir.

The Capital is a fine theatre, albeit superficially rundown, (the urn over the entrance disappeared only a few years ago); its acoustics are good; its interior and exterior design is worthy of restoration. (All across North America movie palaces are being saved, and refurbished.)

The Capital has its own niche in the history of film making in B.C. It exists in a city that has a reputation for preserving the best of its past. If the Capital slips through the fingers of both civic and provincial authorities and Famous Players persists in destroying one of its finer contributions to the cityscape, then the whole question of heritage designation must be called into account. — Thomas R. Palfrey, 941 Meares Avenue.

By any other name

Dr. McGeer's recent statements on the subject of aptitude tests should be questioned. He informs us that these tests measure a type of "general knowledge" which is related to "truth." General knowledge is learned. This type of knowledge varies from culture to culture, society to society. Does any one society have a monopoly on truth?

Secondly, he states that these tests are being used because "they have been responsible for a stunning success in predicting how well students will do during their courses and how well they'll do afterward". In fact, IQ tests have been shown to be relatively good predictors of academic success. They are not as effective in terms of predicting post-academic success.

A better predictor exists in both areas, namely, socioeconomic status. IQ test scores merely reflect this fact. Instead of praising an instrument, the predictive qualities of which are based on the existence of differences in educational opportunity for certain groups of people, we should continue to put all our effort into removing these differences.

Finally, we are being told that intelligence tests are being replaced by aptitude tests, tests of mental skills, tests of problem-solving ability, etc. The name does not matter as long as the purpose of the test is to predict future success. An IQ test by any other name is still an IQ test.

There are valid, educationally useful tests that help point out what and how the student should be taught at the present time, so that he or she has a better chance at success in the future. This is what education is all about. — Ron Martin, 1850 Midgard Avenue.

Sticking to it

In a recent issue of your paper you printed a photograph of a very old couple in hospital, he an extended care patient, and she his wife able to get about a bit on her own, standing solicitously at his bedside. Both were most happy that it had been at last made possible for them to spend practically all of each day together.

As a visitor to a hospital for many years, I have witnessed numerous instances of this devotion — mainly it is the wife that is in better health — right up until the end of the bedridden one's life. Then, in sharp contrast, one reads of young and middle aged folk seeking divorce, perhaps because one is tired of the other, or has met someone with greater appeal. There seems to be no thought of the trauma that is wrought up on the individual who is, suddenly, bereft of a partner, often of a provider.

The steadily increasing divorce rate among North Americans makes one wonder if lack of character, a stick-to-it-iveness, is not as rampant in today's society as are drug addiction and vandalism-prone delinquent youngsters.

What has happened to the marital vow "till death us do part"? Why do we find more infidelity in the last decade? Previously it seems married people "stuck it out" or "stuck together" through thick and thin. Does the blame lie in our educational system? Has there been too much permissiveness where the young are concerned? Whatever, although life is lead compassionately, in your photo story, the situation brims with pathos. There is evidence here that genuine love still lives among us in war-torn planet earth; and it warms one's heart to hear of it. — Gladys Coulthard, 308-105 Gorge Road East.

Sasquatch Socred

Your paper of March 4 quotes George Mussallem, Social Credit MLA, as a would-be protector of Sasquatches — "certain to be free enterprisers and therefore Social Credit supporters . . . I think you would find one taking a prominent place in our party."

I am startled, not so much that a Socred should think this, but that he should be so incautious as to ventilate his thinking: that a prominent place in the Socred party is the proper place for a primitive creature, adapted only for life and survival in a vanishing world of the past — indeed, increasingly seldom seen because of its inability to adapt. — Clare McAllister, 302-118 Croft Street.

No competition

We are writing this letter to inform the citizens of Victoria of certain misconceptions regarding the Victorian Celebrations Society which appeared in the Times Feb. 22, in an article written by Norman Gidney, titled "Shape up or go broke, Victoria arts groups told."

To the uninformed reader the article left the impression that the Victorian Celebrations Society had been, and still is competing with the Greater Victoria Festival Society in organizing Victorian Days; that both societies are embroiled in legal differences and that the Victorian Celebrations Society would receive $9,000.

We take extreme exception to such erroneous reporting; it is therefore our duty to inform the public of truth:

1. Victorian Celebrations Society is not now, and never has competed with any other group to organize Victorian Days; the celebration is a community event and every organization in the city should be involved. We are involved in hospitality, international citrus cannon shoot, penny farthing races and novelty events in Market Square. The GVFS is sponsoring the May Queen, Victoria Day Parade, fireworks and the Gorge Regatta; (to the best of our knowledge, that is).

2. As far as we know, no differences exist between the societies; any previous disagreements were settled out of court some time ago.

3. The Victorian Celebrations Society has received no grant. We applied for one, after receiving a written invitation to do so.

It should not be necessary for us to continually justify our existence; after some 40 years of service to our community, our record should speak for itself. — Glenda Osborne, Co-ordinator, Victorian Celebrations Society.

Sparwood reunion

Sparwood, B.C., is planning a reunion for the Michel-Natal area for June 28, 29 and 30, 1980.

The event will run in conjunction with Sparwood's annual Coal Miner Days and will be highlighted by these festivities as well as events which will be held specially for the people registered for the reunion.

Pre-registration forms are presently being sent out to people who have lived in the area and it is hoped that others will be contacted through relatives and friends as well as newspaper postings.

The Committee Chairperson is Bea Mogielka. She may be reached at Box 673, Sparwood, B.C. V0B 2G0 or telephone 425-6987. — Sparwood Reunion Committee.

Audrey's husband

During a recently televised interview with Laurier LaPierre, Premier Bennett referred to the Provincial Secretary of the New Democratic Party as "Dennis Cocke's wife." We would like to remind Audrey Bennett's husband that women are individuals who have their own names. The name of the woman in question is Yvonne Cocke. — Susan Chang, 322 Masters Road and Gretchen Brewin, 71 Linden Street.

Protect embassies

It has been said in our media recently that the events which have taken place in Iran in the last four months have been "humiliating" for our friends and neighbors, the Americans.

In my opinion the reverse only is true. The seizure of a foreign embassy is an act contrary to international law and it cannot be justified or condoned. In the exuberance of their newly acquired freedom from what they depicted as tyrannical and oppressive government whose head went into exile, the most radical elements of a new Iran offered the world the spectacle of an unruly mob burning flags, shouting insults and threats against 50 people held hostage.

The American reaction has been, so far, one of dignified restraint and heroic patience for the sake of the captives' lives and the maintenance of world peace under extremely difficult circumstances. The conduct of the U.S. government searching for a solution to the crisis through diplomatic channels rather than military force deserves praise, not adverse criticism.

We can only hope that this ordeal will end soon, with the safe return of the captives to their country and their anxious families.

We can also hope that all embassies, all over the world, may be protected by a contingent of United Nations, as standard bearers of international laws with the power to enforce them. — E. I. Lattes, 432—200 Dallas Road.

Sizing cabinet

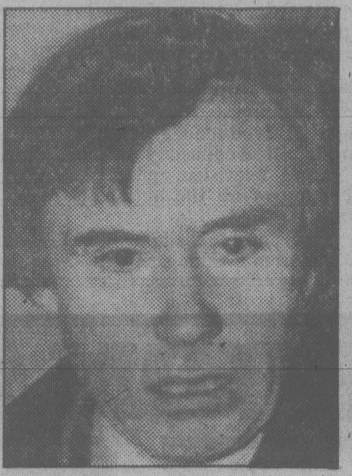
By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The new cabinet at first blush seems very middling: it's not an exciting or colorful group, yet it may well be moderately-competent. The tilt to the left is not so much ideological as anti-New Democrat; that is, more than in any previous ministry so many ministers in it fret more about the NDP pre-empting Grit ground than about the Tories. Examples? The three Windsor ministers, as well as Munro, Erola, Fleming, Kaplan, Lumley, MacEachen, Regan, Axworthy and Argue, of course; De Bane, Begin, Leblanc, even Rompkey.

Put this another way: the new ministry contains, much more than any previous Trudeau picking, the kind of Liberals who worry about the party being "genuinely liberal." There's the odd guy in it like Chretien, even Pepin, of ability and stature. If ideological at all in economic matters, they are right of centre, and certainly Johnston at Treasury Board seems a traditional spokesman for Westmount, a true heir to Bud Drury.

At least one appointment seems very stupid and unnecessarily discouraging to a significant set of interest groups. This is the minister for national defence, Gilles Lamontagne. He's been one of the least engaging, most unpersuasive ministers in the House of the last 20 years. He's almost as bad as the recent minister, Jean-Pierre Goyer, at wooden English. He has little public presence; in other words, a cipher.

One understands readily enough why Trudeau has 13 francophones in his cabinet. That's reality because the French-Canadian vote makes the Liberal party go. But the sustained interest and support for the military, particularly for the reserve forces, and also in veterans' organizations like the Legion, are not strong in French Canada. The Clark ministry stirred a fresh excitement, both in the services and around them, about new directions, plus recaptured traditions. Lamontagne's appointment knocks that dead. Compared to him Barney Danson was a beacon of inspiration.



MACGUIGAN . . . 'buzz-saw'

LAMONTAGNE . . . 'cipher'

There have been assumptions that Mark MacGuigan in external affairs means Trudeau conducting foreign policy. I think this misjudges MacGuigan. He's not a colorful open mouth like Flora or Don Jamieson, but he is a master at detail and in study. In six months he'll have a greater total grasp of every aspect of foreign policy and arrangements than any such minister since Pearson. Trudeau may cavort at a few big occasions like the Council of Seven, but I'd wager the bookish buzz-saw from Windsor will have the grip.

It's easy enough to prefigure the three or four ministers about whom people will be saying wonderingly in a year or two: "Why have they been such duds:" Bet on Francis Fox, Lloyd Axworthy, Bob Kaplan, John Roberts, and Herb Gray.

The last-named is a proven dynamo. He's also, regrettably, a loner, and on such a straight line course that there's little deviousness or flexibility in him. Would that economic nationalism had a more humorous, more satirical advocate than our stolid Herbert.

Fox, Axworthy, and Kaplan are nice packages of style, each as conscious of good grooming and a fine hair-dresser as ever Ron Atkey was. Both Fox and Axworthy have been over-impressive to many because of style. This has led most people to overlook their dreadful lack of content, and in Axworthy's case, the sheer muddle of his thinking. However, he is a "group man" and energetic; he might conceivably hustle along ahead of trouble.

Fox revealed his emptiness last week in some of the silliest maundering in recent years about the security service before the McDonald Inquiry. Francis also has a difficult time telling the truth, and it will catch up with him.

Kaplan is a nice fellow, and one tends to like that in a chap so graced by good fortune and well-to-do connections, but he is naive and over-convinced of his own intellectual reach.

Paul Cosgrove, the new arrival at public works, will likely emerge as "the" Toronto minister. Jim Fleming's abilities have been slighted off the top by the award to him of the lightest, emptiest post of them all, multiculturalism. John Roberts is almost proven as lazy and an intellectual snob.

Who will be the successes of his ministry? I'd bet overwhelmingly on Don Johnston at Treasury Board and on Jean-Luc Pepin in transport. Each is very smart, naturally graceful and adroit. I also think Lumley (trade) and Pinard (House leader) are coming major politicians, very energetic, shrewd, and risk-takers.

If Marc Lalonde's placing in energy is a slap at Lougheed and Alberta, what a blow Hazen Argue's appointment to the Wheat Board is to Blakeney and the New Democrats in Saskatchewan. The NDP can't forget the perfidy of Argue in the '60s when Ross Thatcher figuratively bought him out. Of course, Judy Erola won her place in the ministry by proving quickly to be adept at hiving the New Democrats.

In the briefest summation, this cabinet reflects a determination to change the course of the Liberal Party away from the Turner-Sharp-Winters kind of appeal. It's a pretty shrewd recognition that the troubles of the Tories arose from an over-estimation of the fervor in Canadians for free enterprise and less government.

It's all in your head

By NIGEL HAWKES
London Observer

Why do some people catch colds all the time, while others exposed to the same risk of infection don't? According to a research worker from Linacre College, Oxford, it's all in the mind.

Dr. Richard Totman persuaded 52 volunteers to take part in an experiment at the Common Cold Research Unit in Salisbury to assess how important pyschological factors are in catching a cold.

Before the experiment, the amounts of antibodies in each volunteer were measured. The conventional view is that those people with antibodies left over from previous infections stand a better chance of fighting off a cold.

The volunteers were also assessed psychologically, to assess the amount of stress they had been subjected to, and whether they had recently changed their lives by moving house, taking on a new job or extra work. They were then infected with drops of two cold viruses and left in relative isolation for 14 days.

The results showed that the level of antibodies was not a good predictor of the severity of the cold. Much better was an index which measured the psychological well-being of the volunteers.

The study also suggested that personality may have an influence. Introverts were shown to be much more likely to have a severe cold than extroverts.

The results, reported in this week's New Scientiest, are not unique to colds. Dr. Totman merely uses the cold as a convenient disease which he can give to volunteers without running into ethical objections.

A relative nuisance

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — Friends are God's apology for our relatives, someone once shrewdly said; and anyone who has just had relatives to stay would think that He has a good deal to apologize for.

I am torn between thinking it would be lot easier if all my relations lived in another continent, and realizing that if they did, they would visit me for even longer. Perhaps the ideal distance is still one mile: always reckoned to be perfect, because your mother-in-law had to put on her bonnet before she came to see you, but she was not so far away that she had to come and stay.

It isn't my mother-in-law, however, that I'm complaining about. Over the years we have got her fairly well trained. She no longer gets to the sink within half-an-hour of her arrival, intent on standing in front of it until the end of her visit — I suspect that she enjoyed herself more when, during one holiday, our dishwasher broke down, so there was some point to her incessant compulsion to wash dishes. And as she cheerfully sits in front of the TV shows that we want to watch anyway, she's entirely harmless.

Not so some of the others. They still behave as if we lived in Jane Austen's day, when journeys were so appalling that everyone who went visiting had to rest up for six weeks before they could face the homeward road, and everyone in the world had time.

These relations are on vacation, so they assume you are too. They come and stay during the week, and behave as if it was the weekend; they get up late, which I don't object to, but then hang around the kitchen chatting at an hour when any reasonable woman is either cleaning or out at her job. They sit up till all hours, because they don't have to get up in the morning. They are a pain.

People who live in beautiful or famous places get this worse than most. What finally drives Americans out of Paris is not what the drink is doing to their livers, or even the understandable desire of almost everyone at head office to have a spell in such a delectable location. It's the fact that for about three-quarters of the year they are holiday home to everyone they have ever met — or even to anyone everyone else has ever met. "It's Paris!" say the new arrivals, joyfully, taking over where the last lot, at last thankfully piled into their airplane, left off.

I had a friend with whom — I admit — I used to go and stay. He had gone to the south of France to write books in peace; I think he wrote about a page and a half in the nine years he was there, because of the number of friends sitting about saying, "Tell me, Vincent — yes, thanks, just one more glass — why do you find it so difficult to write these days?"

He finally came back to London and is now writing furiously in a small, dark, smelly flat whose chief (indeed only) advantage is that it doesn't have a guest room. Or a guest bean bag. Or even a rope, such as the one used in the Twopenny Lean-overs in Victorian times — the bums would pay twopence, and lean over the rope all night, and in the morning all the establishment had to do was untie the rope and they all fell on to the floor and were kicked outside.

But, alas, no one has invented the 20th century equivalent of the Twopenny Lean-over for hard-pressed hostesses; and I am beginning to think that travel agents, when they give people their tickets and all that warning stuff about malaria and not carrying aerosol cans and insurance, should also give out a Guest Code. I know how my Best Guest Code would go:

If you are going to drink like a fish, bring your own bottle.

Take your hosts out for one meal for every six they cook for you.

If your hostess tells you not to help, for heaven' sake don't — one of the most wearing things is guests leaping up and doing the dishes as soon as the meal is over; all right for them, they had nine hours' sleep.

In the morning, do not get up more than one hour before you plan to leave the house. If you don't plan to leave till evening, after lunch will be just fine.

And if you are going out for one, three, five, or even (I can dream, can't I?) eight hours, announce this heavenly fact as you go. Then your hostess won't have to hang about all day, wondering when you are coming back; and feeling mean because she's hoping you've been run over by a taxi.

Easier Quebec divorce

By WILLIAM JOHNSON
The Globe and Mail

QUEBEC — The noise and fury of the referendum debate in the National Assembly draws attention away from a bill which proposes fundamental reform of family law.

In the long run Bill 89, an Act to Establish a New Civil Code and to Reform Family Law, is likely to affect the lives of more people than all the rhetoric now spent on the pros and the cons of sovereignty-association.

The bill was introduced last week. It will be a while before it can be passed. Some of its provisions dealing with divorce depend on jurisdiction being transferred from the federal government to the provinces, hardly an immediate prospect. But Bill 89 is in the best daring and reformist tradition of the Parti Quebecois. May it pass before the next provincial election.

The approach to divorce is entirely different from the present adversarial process imposed on us by Canadian law. Current divorce legislation forces the spouses to prove nasty things against each other. The Quebec bill will do away with such grounds as adultery or mental cruelty, to retain only a concept of marriage breakdown such as was put forward in 1976 by the Canadian Law Reform Commission.

"Divorce is granted when the will to maintain the bond of marriage is irretrievably damaged," the bill says simply. It recognizes that marriage in a liberal society depends on the will of the partners to be married. When one or the other is unalterably opposed to the marriage it no longer exists in fact. The law has to be changed to bring it into line with reality.

How will the court judge that the will to maintain the marriage bond is gone? There are four criteria. If both partners have lived apart by mutual agreement for two years, that is sufficient proof; or three years, if only one spouse has decided to live apart, or has been imprisoned, or simply been absent. The absence of sexual relations for a full year, because of illness or disability, is a third criterion. Finally, there is a general provision which is closer to the present grounds for divorce: "A spouse has seriously failed to execute an obligation resulting from the marriage." That gives the courts almost total discretion.

The bill is liberal in other provisions as well. It establishes the full equality of husband and wife, unlike the present law, which makes the husband the head of the household. Qui prend mari prend pays, goes a saying in Quebec. A woman who takes a husband takes his country, in the sense that wherever he resides is where she must reside. No more.

"The spouses choose the family residence together. The spouses together take in hand the moral and material direction of the family. The spouses contribute toward the expenses of the marriage in proportion to their respctive means. Each spouse may make his contribution by his activity within the home."

The most striking illustration of the equality intended by the law is the right and the obligation of the spouses to retain the names they had before the marriage. "In marriage, each spouse retains his surname and given names, and exercises his civil rights under this surname and these given names." In other words, the law will not make it impossible for a woman to be known by her neighbors and relatives by the name of her husband. But as soon as she signs a legal document she must do so under her maiden name.

The same logic of equality applies in the naming of the children. The spouses are left free to have the child take the family name of the father, or of the mother, or a combination of the two family names. Presumably different children in the same family could have different family names. For instance, the boys could be named after their father, the girls after their mother, or vice-versa.

These reforms are courageous, liberal, certainly in keeping with a political philosophy which values equality of citizens before the law. But they are likely to be opposed by the more conservative elements of Quebec society. Particularly in rural areas, patriarchal ideas are common. Some women now refuse to be interviewed by a reporter on the grounds that the husband expresses the family's political views.

For traditionalists, the more liberal grounds for divorce will come as an attack on the institution of the family, an encouragement to marital instability. Even the freedom in naming children will be seen by some as a tampering with sacred traditions. Some will find fault with a law which forces women to retain their maiden name.

The reforms proposed in family law are admirable. But will the Parti Quebecois government have the courage to implement them? I suspect the extent of opposition which will arise has been underestimated. But it would be a fine reform to add to the PQ's record along with reform of auto insurance, agricultural land zoning, reform of election finances and the end of government patronage.

China acts to halt exodus

By LINDA MATHEWS
The Los Angeles Times

PEKING — Hong Kong is a capitalist hell where newcomers must endure frequent unemployment, callous bosses and skyrocketing prices.

So says the Workers' Daily, the journal of China's trade union movement, in an account of a young couple who went to Hong Kong to seek their fortune but returned to China four years later, supposedly worn out by the struggle to earn a living under capitalism.

Their story, given prominent display here, appears to be part of a concerted government campaign to stop discontented Chinese youths from escaping to Hong Kong.

Yielding to pressure from the British authorities in Hong Kong and in London, China in the last month has tightened its border security, stepped up naval patrols of Hong Kong waters and for the first time threatened to jail anyone caught escaping from the mainland.

A stint in a labor reform camp is the mildest punishment possible under the regulations adopted late last month by the government of Guangdong, the province next to Hong Kong. People who organize mass escapes or use violence against border guards face up to 10 years in prison and fines of several hundred dollars, enough to bankrupt most Chinese peasant families.

Welcomed

The issuance of the long-promised regulations was welcomed by the Hong Kong authorities, who had been pleading with China for a year to stop the flow of illegal immigrants fleeing to the already overcrowded colony in record numbers.

"We're glad they've finally agreed to do something," an aide to the Hong Kong governor, Sir Murray MacLehose, said. "We only hope they mean business."

According to the Hong Kong police, 89,495 Chinese were apprehended while crossing the border last year, more than 10 times the number arrested in 1978.

The invasion hit a peak in December, when nearly 15,000 were arrested, leading Hong Kong officials to theorize that many tried to flee before Jan. 8, when the Guangdong law making illegal emigration a criminal offence went into effect.

Although Hong Kong immigration authorities have only rough estimates, they believe that the 1979 exodus from China by both legal and illegal immigrants was so heavy that it may have swelled the colony's population by 250,000, or a full five per cent.

The Hong Kong rule of thumb is that for every illegal immigrant captured at the border and returned to China, one or two make it across undetected. If true, that would mean that as many as 180,000 escapees reached Hong Kong last year. In addition, 70,308 emigrated legally, bearing exit permits issued by the Chinese government.

After repeated appeals from MacLehose, who travelled here in April to confer with Premier Hua Guofeng, China started to reduce the flow of legal immigrants. The number of Chinese showing up at the Hong Kong border with valid exit permits from Peking fell from an average of 450 daily to about 170, still higher than the Hong Kong authorities would have liked but acceptable.

Swimmers too

Until now, no move had been made by Peking to contain the huge number of illegal immigrants escaping on foot across the land border, in junks and fishing boats across the South China Sea, or by swimming across a shark-infested stretch of the sea.

B.C. overtaxed half-billion?

NDP finance critic Dave Stupich said today British Columbians were overtaxed by as much as half a billion dollars last year.

This overtaxation amounts to $200 per man, woman and child in the province, he said.

Finance Minister Curtis has said his new $5.8 billion budget, presented Tuesday, will enable B.C. to leap into the 1980s.

"I think it would be more apt to say it is a budget that will drag us back to the 1930s," Stupich told the legislature in his official reply.

He accused Premier Bill Bennett of having the fastest fiscal gun in the west.

"In the past few weeks we have been treated to the spectacle of the premier lurching out of his office at random moments to announce a series of large-scale capital programs, each one unrelated to the others, unrelated to any plan or any strategy or to anything else save his desperate need to change the subject."

To take the heat off Dirty Tricks, Stupich said, the premier has announced a $200 million mortgage assistance project, the B.C. Place development and the new Annacis Island crossing of the Fraser River.

"You would be hard put to think of ways to spend $500 million which would be less relevant to the serious flaws in B.C.'s economic structure," he said.

"This budget does not make it any easier for the average British Columbian to buy groceries," Stupich said. "It does not make it any easier for him to meet his mortgage payments or buy a house. It doesn't make it any easier to find a job."

Stupich added: "Every person requiring medical treatment but waiting for a hospital bed, every person looking unsuccessfully for work in this province, is doing so in order that the premier can have the option of buying his way out of his political difficulties."

Legislative rowdies on TV if NDP member has his way

NDP MLA Stuart Leggatt wants to bring the rowdy legislature into the living rooms of British Columbians.

He says it might teach the members some manners.

Leggatt introduced a private member's bill Wednesday which would permit television and radio broadcasting of all the action in the house.

The televising of parliament in Ottawa has been a tremendous success, said Leggatt, himself a former MP.

"You'd be surprised how good the ratings are."

He also said televising debate may well act as a restraining influence on the behaviour of some of the more vociferous members and would assist the speaker to maintain decorum.

"It improves the tone of the house," he said. "The quality of debate improves. The quality of questioning improves."

Former deputy A-G brands Vogel comparison political

Judge Les Bewley's comparison of a 1974 decision to drop a manslaughter case with charges that Deputy Attorney-General Richard Vogel meddled in court cases is highly political, David Vickers, former deputy attorney-general said Wednesday.

Vickers, who is now in private law practice in Victoria, was replying to a statement by Bewley, a Vancouver provincial court judge who said he was astonished at the uproar following charges last week in a CBC television news report that Vogel influenced three court cases involving people he knew.

Vogel is on paid leave of absence while the allegations are being investigated by the attorney-general's ministry.

The Vogel affair pales into insignificance when compared with a "very serious interference with the administration of justice" in 1974 when Vickers stayed proceedings in a manslaughter case when he was in Vogel's post, Bewley said.

Vickers said Bewley's comparison was political and not based on legal grounds.

He said Bewley's remarks are legally incorrect because it is the constitutional duty of the attorney-general's ministry to decide what cases go to court and that his actions then, and Vogel's now, cannot be legally questioned.

The Canadian system of justice places the decision on whether cases are tried with the attorney-general's office, he said.

Meanwhile, Attorney-General Allan Williams Wednesday supplied an answer outside the legislature that the opposition has spent a great deal of time trying, unsuccessfully, to pry loose in the house.

For three days the NDP has been peppering Williams with questions about the part being played by his associate deputy, Neil McDiarmid, in the review of the Vogel affair.

The opposition argued McDiarmid had already looked into two of the cases previously and therefore should not be involved in the current review.

NDP members were able to elicit little information from Williams.

But outside the house the minister told reporters McDiarmid is only investigating one of the three cases — the one he had not been involved in previously.

Williams himself is reviewing the other two cases.

Why his stonewalling performance in the house? "Maybe you should ask the opposition why they don't ask clear questions," he replied.

Farm buying control urged

The provincial government should control buying of B.C. farmland by foreigners as a first step to prevent food shortages in the future, Lorne Nicolson (NDP — Nelson-Creston) told the B.C. legislature Wednesday night.

"There is an alarming amount of acquisition of farmland taking place by non-nationals," Nicolson said during debate on the government's plans to spend $6.2 billion in the next fiscal year.

"The very people that are putting money into gold also are looking from Europe at farmland in B.C., and in the Creston Valley there has already in the past couple years been over 1,000 acres of land acquired mostly by German people."

Some of the buyers are landed immigrants and are farming, he said.

"They are welcome and I am sure they will be good citizens. But the thing that does bother me are absentee owners that are purchasing land."

Nicolson said he is concerned that one quarter of the 20,000 acres of the prime Creston flats farmland is for sale.

"I think this is a very serious problem and I have heard nothing about the government's measures to curb foreign land acquisitions and the possible problems that that will have for us in a few years," he said.

He said that today energy seems to be the big crisis but a food industry crisis is on the way.

"We're going to have the same economic pressures if we do not do something, and the first step is to look at the control of foreign land purchases, particularly at agriculture lands when they are held by absentee landlords."

Nicolson also asked the government to reveal what has caused the closure of the Kokanee trout fishery which he said is the most popular tourist fishery on Kootenay Lake.

He said more funds should be made available to enhance the fishery. Solutions might be found in examining nutrient levels in the lake and in artificial spawning channels.

Never intended to burn mobile home: soldier

A 33-year-old soldier accused of arson told a county court jury Wednesday he never intended to set fire to his mobile home in Langford last summer.

And John Berton Davidson denied portions of a signed statement given two RCMP officers June 16, including splashing gasoline on the walls.

He said he was angry at being asked if he was a homosexual, a question police denied asking, that he didn't read the statement and didn't care at the time what it said because he just wanted to get away from police.

In the statement, Davidson said he got up on the morning of June 16 and the smell of varsol, which he used the night before to clean up a dye stain on a hallway rug, "was so bad in the house I figured it would be a good way to get a new trailer and I rubbed gas over the same area as the varsol and spread some down the sides of the walls, on the rug, along the sides.

"I put the box of books in the truck and then put the pistol and ammunition in. I had gone back in for the rifle and ammunition and while bending over to pick up the ammunition the place went up."

The statement also contained these questions and answers:

"When did you intend to light the trailer on fire?"

"Sometime later tonight. I hadn't really thought of it. I wasn't really sure I was going to do it but I had gone that far."

"Do you know how the fire started?"

"No I don't."

"Why did you want the trailer to burn?"

"I wasn't sure if I wanted it to burn but it would be a way to get another trailer that was newer."

There were other questions and answers and the statement ended: "I have read this page and the previous three pages of my statement. It is true and I have given it of my own free will."

The statement was signed by Davidson and constables Melvin Carter and Murray Dreilick.

Davidson testified he bought the home for $23,000 and had it insured for replacement value. While putting liquid boot dye on his combat boots two days before the fire, he accidentally knocked it over in the hallway.

The next day he used some varsol to clean it up and was partially successful. He ran out of varsol, went to a pub for a couple of hours, and bought two gallons of gasoline on his way back for a power saw because he was going to cut wood for a friend.

He said he took the gasoline into the mobile home because he intended to mix it with oil.

When he got up next morning, he saw there was still a substantial amount of boot dye in the rug and decided to use gasoline. He said he shut off the furnace and the circuit to the drier and one other circuit before using the varsol earlier.

After cleaning the rug, he began to load his pickup truck for a trip to a rifle and pistol range on the Malahat.

As he bent over to pick up some ammunition "I became aware of fire, stood up and turned around and the hallway was on fire. I just heard the sound of fire starting. It sounded like a flammable liquid igniting."

He said he ran to the kitchen, grabbed the gasoline can, and left the home.

He didn't tell Langford fire chief Al LeQuesne that he was using gasoline because he was afraid it would be assumed he set fire to the home.

Davidson, a radio electronics technician, said it was unlikely a transistor radio would give off a spark because of its low voltage and he denied rigging or modifying the radio to create a spark to set off gasoline vapors.

The trial was expected to conclude today with the defence calling a second witness, a fire investigator.

6 months added to term

A 23-year-old man who committed an offence while free on mandatory supervision for an armed robbery has lost his remission time and had six months added to his time in the penitentiary.

Ronald Phillip Mack pleaded guilty before Judge Peter Millward in county court to breaking and entering and theft on Jan. 29 of Pacific Mazda Peugeot, 810 Johnson.

He was on mandatory supervision when he committed the break-in.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said Mack's three-year sentence for a Vancouver armed robbery doesn't expire until Dec. 19.

Millward said Wednesday that because Mack is young he would not add to his robbery sentence a period of time which will severely hamper him but there had to be a punishment in addition to loss of remission time and he gave him six months which will start to be served Dec. 19.

Police found Mack hiding behind used cars with a variety of keys and cash taken from the car dealership.

25% hike in ferry traffic

Vehicle and passenger traffic on B.C. Ferry Corp. vessels increased by 25 per cent in February compared with February last year, the corporation said Wednesday.

Transport Minister Alex Fraser said more ships are needed, but financing is a major concern.

Meanwhile, the ferry corporation has approved the purchase of land and a water lot from Canadian National Railways in Prince Rupert for construction of a new dock.

The corporation shares a federal dock with another ferry service.

Brothers champs

Two brothers from George Jay Elementary School are grade champs in South Vancouver Island Chess Championships and will compete in Campbell River for the island title March 22.

Tyler Johnson, 12, was Grade 7 winner in the meet last Friday in Duncan, and his eight-year-old brother Christopher was Grade 3 champion. They competed with players from Saanich, Gulf Islands, Duncan and Cowichan school districts.

Other top players from the meet who will play against seven north island winners in the Island Championships are: Grade 1, Darren Copp, Frank Hobbs Elementary; Grade 2, Andrew Hobbs, Elsie Miles Elementary; Grade 4, Karl Pires, Beaver Lake Elementary; Grade 5, Andrew Chow, Marigold; and Grade 6, Gary Basanta, Glanford.

Ancient campsite found in Wash.

SNOHOMISH, Wash. (AP) — Road crews have unearthed the remains of an ancient campsite which archeologists say may be among the oldest in Western Washington.

The campsite, found in a steep bluff one kilometre [illegible] Snohomish, is probably 5,000 to 7,000 years old, says James Chatters, a University of Washington scientist.

Chatter says the small campsite was surprisingly undisturbed, having remained unplowed by farmers and isolated from logging.

Before the judge

The former manager of the Victoria branch of an investment firm pleaded guilty Wednesday in provincial court to theft, fraud, false pretences, and uttering a forged document.

James Nicholas Simmons, 30, now living at 559 Midvale in Coquitlam, faced five counts of theft over $200, two counts each of fraud and false pretences, and one of uttering a forged document.

The charges arose from Simmons' employment as manager of Wood Gundy Investments Ltd., 707 Fort, between August and November last year and involved the manipulatuion of investors accounts and theft of money and securities valued at $216,773.44.

Judge Lorne Pearce agreed with defence lawyer Thomas Braidwood of Vancouver that a presentence report would be in order and remanded Simmons, who is free on his own undertaking, until April 21 for sentencing.

Four of the five theft counts involve money belonging to Donald Sing, administrator of the estate of Frank Sing. The other theft count involves 2,000 shares of Canada Permanent Income Investment units belonging to his mother, Ruth Florence Simmons, by converting the shares to his own use.

Simmons also admitted defrauding Mamaie Sing of $30,000 on Aug. 21, and defrauding Theodore Hudec of $15,000 on Aug. 24.

The two false pretences counts are in connection with $45,000 belonging to Wood Gundy.

The uttering count is in connection with an application form for an investment account.

A 52-year-old mother of six was given a suspended sentence and six months probation after pleading guilty to defrauding the Langford branch of the Bank of Montreal of $1,904.06 starting in March, 1977.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Ethel June Adams, 1315 Esquimalt, went to the bank at 2808 Bryn Maur on March 23, 1977, and opened a chequing account in the name of Ethel Campbell, her mother, who died Jan. 18, 1977.

Laughton said Adams deposited 25 government pension cheques for widows made out to her deceased mother.

Defence lawyer John Hills said his client still had one teenaged daughter at home. At the time of the incident, Hills said, the woman had just separated from her husband, was supporting two children, and was in a bad financial position.

He also said Adams tried to return the first two cheques but they were returned to her, at which time the "temptation became too great."

Hills presented the judge with an envelope which contained the money owing the bank and offered it as restitution.

Two men who were objects of a manhunt Tuesday appeared in court on charges of escaping lawful custody and being unlawfully at large from William Head prison.

Roger Henry Lalonde, 29, of Vancouver, and Malcolm James Pitman, 26, of Toronto, were remanded in custody until March 26 for election of their trial method.

They were arrested about 2 p.m. Tuesday by RCMP near Colwood Corners after two men were reported missing from the medium-security, federal penitentiary Monday night.

A 22-year-old American citizen was given 30-day, concurrent sentences after pleading guilty to remaining in Canada without proper registration and working without a permit.

Dale Allan Robertson told the judge he assumed a Canadian identity because of disrespect Canadians normally showed Americans. He described the Canadian attitude towards Americans as "come in, spend your money, and get out."

Crown counsel Dorothy Robbins said Robertson entered the country April 29, 1979, at Niagara Falls, stating he was visiting friends and relatives in Ontario.

However, Robertson decided to head west and did casual labor in Winnipeg between May and August of last year without a permit.

Robbins also told the court Robertson had convictions in Winnipeg for mischief and theft, in Regina for theft, in Calgary for mischief, and in Victoria for assault by trespassing, mischief, possession of a narcotic, and theft.

A 51-year-old man who kicked and pushed a Victoria police constable was fined $100, placed on a year's probation, and ordered to attend Alcoholies Anonymous or any other alcoholic treatment program as directed.

Donald Victor Gunn, 200 Dallas, pleaded guilty to obstructing a peace officers but told Judge Pearce his actions were caused by a combination of pills for a heart condition and beer on the night of March 1.

Laughton said the incident began about 9 p.m. when Constable Michael Sikora spotted Gunn on his hands and knees at Douglas and Superior.

Sikora asked if Gunn was all right but was greeted with verbal abuse. When the officer tried to help Gunn up, a struggle ensued and Gunn accused Sikora of being a postman, not a policeman.

Gunn then pushed and kicked Sikora, who required the aid of a civilian witness to handcuff Gunn.

Fined for drinking-driving were: William Dale Seargent, 28, of 2206 Church, $450; Brent Steven Walsh, 25, now of Kelowna, $400; and Harold Wainman, age and address not given, $300.

In addition, Walsh was fined $150 for resisting a peace officer by biting him Jan. 5.

Dart assault in aid of charity

Two dart-a-thons involving a total of 100 hours of continuous dart throwing will be staged at the Esquimalt Legion and the Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans.

All funds raised will go towards the B.C. Lions Society for Crippled Children.

Competitors will include the Beamers and Sasquatch dart teams from the legion but endurance rather than skill is what will really count in this competition, says organizer Irene Hornosty.

The Legion dart-a-thon will take place March 19-21 and the Army, Navy and Airforce event March 21-23.

Public TV support sought

A bid to initiate public broadcasting on TV's Channel 10 is being made by a group inviting widespread community membership, including the CBC, provincial government and educational institutions.

A steering committee arising out of the Association for Public Broadcasting in B.C. will hold a public meeting at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Unitarian Church, 106 Superior, to be chaired by Vancouver writer-film director Tom Shandel.

Committee member Beth Dickman of Victoria (478-3126) said since the proposal became known she has received many supporting calls.

She said the movement has grown since the CBC abandoned Channel 10, which had been allocated to the national broadcasting organization as its Victoria outlet.

A studio on Kings at Blanshard, which was to be headquarters of CBC radio and TV on Vancouver Island, was considered a likely place for the proposed public TV service. But Dickman said the CBC intends to sell the building.

A name for the new station has yet to be chosen. Dickman said the suggested call letters CTEN-TV are unlikely to be approved by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission and further choice is limited.

Other provinces have a form of public TV, such as Access Alberta, Radio-Quebec, and TV Ontario, but nothing comparable exists in B.C., unless the Seattle-based Channel 9 is considered. This member of the Public Broadcasting System is supported in large part by voluntary donations from B.C. viewers.

The proposed outlet in Victoria would be distinctively British Columbian, the organizers suggest. It would be Canada's first non-commercial, subscriber-owned and operated TV station.

Its sources of programming would include local, professionally-done productions representing all regions of the province; programs from the other Canadian non-commercial stations; overseas productions such as broadcast by Channel 9; co-productions with CBC, National Film Board, PBS, BBC and the provincial TV agencies; educational, cultural and public service programs.

A $5 initial membership fee is proposed with the bulk of financing to come from public subscriptions and private grants. Other sources could include direct aid from governments, a cable licence fee or provincial cable tax, and educational institutions.

Diamonds: patience, luck

By PAUL MINVIELLE

The story goes that some African tribesmen, searching for highly-prized tsavorite garnets, were discarding any orange garnet, disdainfully calling it "malaya" — not an Asian country but the Swahili word for prostitute.

When the stones were later found to be desirable, they were naturally called malaya garnets.

Tony de Goutiere, who has been in the diamond business for 30 years and at his store in the Estevan shopping centre for 20 years, is a fund of such stories and he enjoys showing the little display case of rare stones from around the world.

The stones in the case include aquamarines, emeralds, amethysts, rubies, opals, sapphires, topazes, tourmalines . . . there are 40 different stones and each name has its own legends and traditions.

The chips in the little case carry a total retail price tag of around $50,000, which raises the subject of stones, particularly diamonds, as an investment.

Like most reputable dealers, de Goutiere is reluctant to promote diamonds as an investment, although he does think of them as portable wealth.

"They should be bought for the pleasure that comes from wearing them."

But in troubled times, few things do as good a job of moving one's wealth out of a threatened area to a safe haven as a fine diamond does.

Perhaps the only object smaller and worth a comparable amount would be a very rare stamp, but if it's going to be a rough trip, a smart bettor would put his money on diamonds.

So buy diamonds first as jewelry, and secondly as portable wealth.

De Goutiere . . . watch for flaws

How about investment?

Well, you'd have to be patient and lucky to make money quickly, but in the long run it's a safe bet fine diamond values will rise; diamond prices are 250 per cent higher than they were five years ago.

The difference between precious metals and stones, however, is that there can be huge differences in the quality of diamonds and other gems.

Gold is gold, and there can be an accurate measure of its purity, whereas diamonds have character.

Sometimes that character is flawed.

Once you start checking into the grading of diamonds, the importance of having a reputable dealer becomes self-evident.

A flawless stone is free from all internal and external blemishes or faults of every description when checked by an expert under any kind of light using special 10 power microscopes.

VVS1 and VVS2 have small (very very slight), hard-to-spot blemishes.

The top end of grades VS1, VS2, S1, S2 is where they put stones that just missed VVS.

Stones at the bottom end barely missed being graded imperfect — I1 and I2.

Then there's color, and you need special equipment to rate diamonds. In the GIA system, D is colorless. From then on, it's a matter of how much yellow there is, and the scale runs through to X. If you're going for an investment, never go below H.

De Goutiere displayed one stone, apparently colorless, with a $10,000 price tag.

The yellow became obvious on the scale and the color was rated M.

"If the color was better, it'd be worth $75,000," de Goutiere said.

"Diamond investment is a game for the wealthy. If you're investing in diamonds, you have to be ready to wait."

But there's no denying their value. Although he was unable to reveal identities, de Goutiere was called in to appraise diamonds offered as part payments in some recent real estate transactions in Victoria.

And de Goutiere says people who bought diamonds 20 years ago and bring them in for appraisal now are astounded.

He says very few people are buying diamonds as investments but there have been several phone calls asking about investment diamonds.

If you're buying a diamond, it should have a jewelry appraisal certificate from the Gemological Institute of America, De Goutiere advised, and beware of buying gems by mail (there have been several frauds).

Diamonds at bargain basement prices?

Common sense still dictates the buyer should beware. Check things out first.

The sermon for this week is on selfishness and smallmindedness. There's a large supply of both around these days.

Over at my favorite regional district, the continuing debate about bus passes for the elderly and the larger question of how to raise the Capital Regional District's $2 million share of the 1980 transit deficit has produced deadlock, threats of mutiny and gratuitous insults for the elderly and the press. But no decision, not even a hint of consensus.

It's just one more symptom of the disease afflicting the CRD. The suburban and rural directors for the first time are wielding real political power, and they are determined to get as much as they can.

What's in it for me? That rallying cry stifled the CRD's first attempt at breathing life into the economic development commission, and if given the chance, the CRD members from the boondocks would sabotage transit as well.

They fight dirty. They wouldn't just express their distaste for a transit gas tax, then acquiesce in a majority decision. Democracy isn't good enough for them. They threatened to walk out en masse last week, which would have left the board without a quorum and unable to make any decision.

Saanich council didn't help by not sending an alternate for vacationing mayor Mel Couvelier. That lost Saanich five of its 15 votes and permitted passage of the goofy proposal for an electric bill surcharge.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said he wouldn't allow it, but such fine points don't seem to bother the CRD directors from outside the four core municipalities.

They have a single-minded hatred of a gas tax and all's fair in the war to defeat it.

A tax on electric bills has no relationship to transit at all. A gas tax is at least related to moving people from place to place.

There is a basic fairness to it. If you don't want to pay the gas tax, you ride the bus and make more room on the road for motorists. If you want to drive downtown all by yourself in your 4,000-pound automobile, you pay extra for the privilege. Your tax on gas helps subsidize the buses for others.

The CRD dissidents and disturbers talk as if they were the last of the pioneers, paying their own way and disdaining government subsidies. The ferries, for example, are considered a basic right of life in the Gulf Islands.

Who pays for them? Not the residents with their free rides from island to island and subsidized commuter rates to Vancouver Island and the mainland. British Columbians as a whole pay for the ferry system used mainly by less than one-sixth of the province's population, as our taxes help subsidize the chronically ill B.C. Rail.

The renegades out in the islands and the electoral areas depend on the metropolitan area centred on Victoria — for jobs, social services, recreation, health care — whether they like it or not.

But nobody's asking them to love us. Just use a little common sense and logic before tearing into the wicked leeches in the cities.

The provincial government calls it throwing good money after bad, but I call it false economy. First the scrapping of the Marguerite, now the promise to demolish the Glenshiel Hotel, the downtown home of 60 elderly Victorians.

The building is only worth $420,000 and it needs $500,000 in repairs, says Transport Minister Alex Fraser. Besides, the government needs it for a parking lot and all of the residents will be relocated in equivalent accommodation.

And how much will that cost? A 70-bed intermediate care home (in effect, the Glenshiel) is to be built not far away in James Bay — for $1.3 million, not including land costs. Even if the government spends more than the hotel is worth on repairs, it's saving money — not to mention the less tangible costs, such as the considerable investment in energy used to manufacture the bricks in the Glenshiel.

Surcharge decision due today

The provincial cabinet was to decide today whether to allow the Capital Regional District to impose a surtax on B.C. Hydro bills to cover a $2.2 million deficit for public transportation.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Wednesday the legislation is not clear.

"It really does not say they can't do it. It doesn't specifically prohibit them. I can't recommend it but they may have us on a technicality.

"Also, if they refuse to accept another approach, time is running out and we're in a bit of a spot."

The CRD takes over public transit on April 1.

Transit committee chairman, Mayor Norma Sealey of Sidney, said Wednesday the regional district will have to choose from alternative means of funding the deficit (a three-cent-per-gallon surtax on gasoline and diesel fuel or property taxes) if the Hydro surtax is turned down.

She agreed that Larry Miller, assistant general manager of the Urban Transit Authority, had told the CRD several times that, in the absence of a decision, the losses would automatically fall on property taxes. But she said executive director Dennis Young had said this was not so.

CRD board chairman Jim Campbell said if no decision is made the district would simply run up a deficit that would have to be paid off next year.

Meanwhile, Vancouver area residents will begin paying a 53-cent monthly surcharge on their utility bills April 1 to help pay for transit deficits — more than double what transit planners had originally expected.

Port Moody Mayor Ian Young, chairman of the Greater Vancouver Regional District's transportation committee, said the increase came after the district and the UTA determined what is needed to run the transit system they inherited from Hydro. The initial figure was 24 cents.

The utility bill surcharge is in addition to the .7 cents-a-litre tax on gasoline. Both are to pay the districts 25-per-cent share of the estimated $66 million deficit the system will incur this year.

Fishboat sinks, tug missing in sudden storm

A sudden storm Wednesday sank a fishboat and downed power lines on southern Vancouver Island, dumped snow on the upper island and is believed to have wrecked a tugboat in the Queen Charlottes.

More rain and the possibility of snow at upper levels is forecast during blustery, unsettled weather for the next few days.

Ships and aircraft are still looking for the missing tug Detour and its crew of two in Skidegate Channel area off the west coast of the Charlottes. Search and rescue authorities are withholding names of the man and woman who were aboard the 35-foot vessel.

An oil slick was spotted before dark 48 kilometres west of Queen Charlotte City. A helicopter and other aircraft from 442 Squadron, CFB Comox, the tug Medco Surf and a Coast Guard helicopter from Prince Rupert were taking part in the search today.

Victoria fisherman Gary Anderson was rescued from the Shell Islands Group by a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter from Pt. Angeles after his 40-foot vessel Western H. sank about 6 p.m. three miles east of Sidney.

He was taken from Patricia Bay airport by ambulance to Saanich Peninsula Hospital, treated for exposure and released.

The Victoria weather office said the storm struck after a confused weather pattern developed off the west coast.

Forecaster Norman Dressler said a gale warning was issued for the west coast of V.I. and Georgia Strait Wednesday morning. With later weather information, the warning was dropped, but when a satellite photo of Pacific weather conditions was received, the warning was restored at 12:30 p.m. for the west coast, and at 3:30 p.m. for Georgia Strait.

The storm struck about 4 p.m on lower Vancouver Island and 15 minutes later electric power was cut by falling branches, trees and poles in a number of areas in the capital region.

In the 24 hours to 4 a.m. a total of 14.4 mm of rain was recorded here, driven by winds gusting up to 53 knots at 4:04 p.m. and 5:30 a.m.

Above 2,000 feet it snowed several inches, and at Campbell River 11 cm of wet snow was measured early this morning.

Dressler said overnight temperatures would drop to the 0-2 degrees range, depending on altitude, rising Friday to a range of 5-7 degrees, with mixed cloud, shower and winds from the southeast, but not as strong as Wednesday.

Residents of the Glen Lake-Metchosin area lost power from 4:15 to 7 p.m. when a major line came down at Happy Valley and Broadview.

Smaller or intermittent power failures were scattered throughout the area, some affecting only a few houses, others blacking out neighborhoods in Gordon Head, North Saanich, Wilkinson, Lochside, Otter Point and Sooke River areas.

How to beat criminals

The Victoria Times has joined the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce and Victoria area police departments in sponsoring a crime prevention seminar here next month.

The seminar, similar to the successful one put on last year under chamber sponsorship, is designed to give businessmen tips on protecting themselves against crime.

There will be displays, audio-visual presentations and guest speakers from private industry and police departments discussing shoplifting, bad cheques, frauds, employee theft and breaking and entering.

Five sessions will be held over three days — April 14-16 — at Laurel Point Inn.

Two are scheduled for the mornings — 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. on April 15 and 16.

The other three are evening sessions from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.

The longer evening sessions will include discussion on employee theft.

A highlight will be a talk by reformed bank robber Ray Johnson at the opening session at 7:30 p.m. April 14.

The seminar costs $15 per business for a maximum of five employees plus $2 for each additional employee attending.

Registration forms are being accepted by the Chamber of Commerce, 1020 Government.

Yes vote possible in Quebec in June . . . but that's it

By MIKE HUGHES

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque has a reasonable chance of getting a "yes" vote in the June referendum, David Johnston, principal of McGill University, said Wednesday.

However, that referendum will only allow his Parti Quebecois government to begin negotiations on special status for the province in relation to the rest of Canada, he said in an interview.

It will take a second referendum to decide any final action by Quebec.

Johnston said he feels the majority of Quebecers won't object to negotiations on the general subject of special status but when it comes to the crunch there will be no majority vote for any form of separation.

"My reading is that the majority of Quebecers aren't hostile to the rest of Canada.

"The majority of Quebecers probably want different constitutional arrangements so as to place more government responsibility at the provincial and local level."

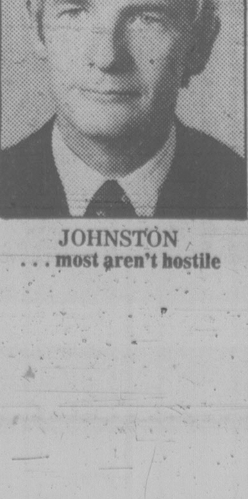
This sentiment is not exclusive to Quebec, Johnston said, but prevelant in Newfoundland now with the offshore oil discoveries, in Alberta and also to a certain extent in B.C.

Johnston, 38, was guest speaker Wednesday night at the annual Victoria Bar Association lecture in the University of Victoria senate chamber.

When appointed principal of McGill last September, he was the youngest university principal in the country.

McGill is an English university in Montreal with an enrolment of 18,000 full-time students and 15,000 part-time.

Prior to the McGill appointment Johnston was dean and professor in the law faculty at the University of Western Ontario. He served as a member of the Ontario Securities Commission for seven years to 1979 and helped draft the Ontario Securities Act in 1978.



JOHNSTON
. . . most aren't hostile

He was the moderator of the television debate between Pierre Trudeau, Joe Clark and Ed Broadbent during the May, 1979 federal election campaign.

He said he is concerned about the political division in the country that was illustrated in the last two federal elections.

Johnston said he is not in favor of any kind of proportional representation system although possibly a a refashioned Senate with representatives from each province might help.

"The problem is a consequence of democracy and something that we are going to have to recognize and wrestle with.

"It is going to require a greater effort from the national parties to be truly representative of national interests. The conservatives have got to solve the problem of their representation in Quebec and the Liberal government has got to acquire a better understanding of the aspirations of western Canada and attempt to meet those aspirations."

Smelter promised for B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A $400-million copper smelter for one of four possible sites in British Columbia was promised Wednesday by an airframe builder and engine maker bidding to supply Canada with its next front-line fighter plane.

General Dynamics of Fort Worth, Texas, and Pratt and Whitney, of Hartford, Conn., said they had been working for a year on feasibility studies for a copper smelter in B.C.

This benefit would be in addition to the $2.87 billion already promised in offset advantages to Canada if General Dynamics is awarded a $2.3-billion contract to equip the Canadian Armed Forces with its single-engine F-16 fighter.

The competition to the F-16 is a plane developed by Northrop Corp. and offered here by McDonnell Douglas Corp.

Both McDonnel Douglas and General Dynamics have been seeking provincial support for their fighters. In its last sales swing through the West, McDonnell Douglas offered to promote tourism in B.C.

General Dynamics and Pratt and Whitney, which is supplying the engines for the F-16, are offering a smelter employing between 400 and 500, to be sited at Kitimat, Prince George, Kamloops or Kimberley. Gross sales for the smelter over a 15-year term are assessed at $2.6 billion.

So far, the two U.S. companies have interested British Kynock Metals Ltd., of the United Kingdom, Japanese metals companies and B.C. Development Corp. in the venture.

25 year low for economy?

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian economy in 1980 will show its worst performance in more than 25 years, a Royal Bank of Canada vice-president predicted today.

Reg MacDonald told delegates to the Canadian Agricultural Commodities Conference that the economy will grow by only 1.5 per cent this year while inflation will remain at 10 per cent.

Interest rates, a major concern to consumers home buyers, should drop by 1.5 per cent but could rise again in 1981.

But MacDonald said Canadians should remain optimistic because Canada is the only industrialized country with any hope of achieving energy self-sufficiency in this century.

Shell drills successful B.C. well

CALGARY (UPC) — Shell Canada Resources Ltd. reports it has completed a successful wildcat well in northeast British Columbia that flowed up to 671,000 cubic metres of gas per day in a production test.

The wildcat well — Shell West Sierra C97L 941-II — was located 70 kilometres east of Fort Nelson, B.C.

The well was drilled to a depth of 2,225 metres, Shell said, and "a production test of a Middle Devonian carbonate section flowed gas at rates up to 671,000 cubic metres per day."

Bank profits take a dive

TORONTO (CP) — Profit levels for Canadian banks slipped in the three months ending Jan. 31, for the first quarterly decline in profits in almost three years.

The after-tax balance of revenue of the eight largest banks was $285.9 million, down 0.9 per cent from fourth-quarter 1979. The previous quarterly decline, 1.4 per cent, occurred in the second quarter of fiscal 1977.

A survey prepared for The Globe and Mail said that since second-quarter 1977, bank profits have been buoyant with gains as large as 41.5 per cent.

However in the latest quarter, banks experienced the effects of three prime lending rate increases, accompanying deposit rate increases and the effects of continuing high deposit rates.

The worst performance was by National Bank of Canada, whose after-tax balance of revenue was $548,000, 95-per-cent lower than the year-earlier total of $11 million.

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce also fared poorly. Its after-tax profit of $46 million was down 8.1 per cent from a year earlier.

At the other end of the scale, Bank of Nova Scotia's profit was up 11.8 per cent to $49 million.

Other banks included in the survey were the Royal Bank of Canada, the Bank of Montreal, Toronto Dominion, the Mercantile Bank of Canada and the Bank of British Columbia.

Patients' fees up 38% if MDs' demands unmet

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia patients can expect to pay an extra 38 per cent of doctors' fees in 1981 if the provincial government does not meet doctors' wage demands, the president-elect of the B.C. Medical Association said Wednesday.

That would mean an initial office visit, which currently costs medicare $12.50, would also cost a patient $4.75.

"It would be 38 per cent because that's how far behind we've fallen," Dr. Alex Mandeville said in an interview.

Mandeville outlined his position in a brief to the federal health services review conducted by Mr. Justice Emmett Hall.

Earlier, the current BCMA executive said its members would be asked to turn to balance billing, which involves charging patients a fee above that paid by the government medicare plan, if the provincial government did not come to terms with the doctors.

The Mandeville brief said doctors must see 40 to 50 patients a day to "pay their rent" when it would be preferable to see 25 patients a day.

Mandeville told reporters he did not know if doctors would reduce their patient load if fees were increased to the level they demanded.

Mandeville said a great deal of doctors' time is taken up by trivia and the only way to stop unnecessary visits would be to bill patients directly for a portion of the fee.

The BCMA has not decided what increase it will seek in fee negotiations which start in November, but Mandeville, who takes office June 1, made it clear he will press for a 38-per-cent increase.

"From 1972 to 1979, successive negotiations have failed to protect the doctor's net income against inflation so that the 1979 fee schedule is 38 per cent behind the level necessary to have kept pace with the rise in the cost of living," his brief said.

Statistics Canada figures show that between 1961 and 1978 the average weekly wage of an industrial worker increased by 358 per cent while physicians' net annual incomes climbed by an average of 247 per cent.

Statistics Canada says the physicians' average annual income was $55,800 in 1978. If it had increased by 358 per cent from 1961 it would have been be $80,673, a difference of 44 per cent.

When the provincial government forced the BCMA in 1971 to accept a one-year moratorium on fees, it reneged on a 1968 agreement to increase the medicare fee schedule on an annual basis in relation to increases in the cost of living, Mandeville said.

What security do baseball owners have?

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — He is the last of a vanishing baseball breed — an owner in the game for love and survival — and he sees nothing but black clouds ahead.

"The players all say they want security," said Calvin Griffith, president and board chairman of Minnesota Twins. "What security do the owners have?

"Salaries are soaring out of sight. Agents have us by the throats. The value of talent has been cockeyed. Where are we going to go? What is the future? It worries me."

Griffith is one of the club owners caught in the current squeeze of the renegotiation of a new players' agreement, effective with the 1980 season.

Many insiders predict a strike. Even the most optimistic forsees a bitter, blood-letting battle in the meeting rooms and a delay in the campaign opening.

"We have to taper off some way," said Griffith, propping his feet on the desk of his executive office at Tinker Field, the Twins' training headquarters.

"We must get away from the arbitration. We must devise some means of proper compensation for players lost in the free-agent draft. Some rein must be put on payrolls. We can't survive the way we are going."

Griffith is unique in the modern baseball structure. He doesn't own shipyards. He doesn't sell billions of hamburgers a year. He is not a Wall Street conglomerate. He is merely the head of a ball club that has been in the family for generations.

He and his sister, Mrs. Thelma Griffith Haynes, inherited it from their uncle, Clark Griffith, long boss of Washington Senators. The elder Griffith died in 1955. Five years later the franchise was moved to Minnesota where it has compiled a winning record (.523) for 19 years and frequently finished in the black.

With the Stonehams yielding their Giants' empire, Griffith and Chicago White Sox' Bill Veeck remain the only owners to whom the game is a livelihood. And Veeck is an imaginative entrepreneur who, with syndicate support, has moved in and out of baseball over the years.

Griffith, a burly, headstrong man who began as a bat boy in the days of the great Walter Johnson and worked his way through the minors to a place in the game's hierarchy, has stoutly resisted the wild-spending free-agent sweepstakes.

Last year, the Twins drew 1,070,521 and, after trading super batsman Rod Carew, stayed in the pennant fight until the last two weeks of the season.

"I still think the best way to build an organization is through farm development," Griffith said, "but it's getting tougher. Branch Rickey once had 22 ball clubs. We once had nine but are now down to 4½."

Griffith said he found the present baseball climate very distressing and discouraging.

"Take the Pittsburgh Pirates," he said. "They were the world champions. No one played better baseball. You can't give the fans better entertainment. Yet they lost $1 million. They say the Phillies lost $3 million."

Griffith said the aim of every baseball club is to develop a gate attraction such as the Yankees' Reggie Jackson — "classical, controversial, he hustles and excites" — but under present conditions it is an elusive commodity.

"You sign a kid out of high school," he said. "You give him a bonus, you develop him in the minors, option him out for two years and, when he shows promise, you bring him to the big leagues.

"If you develop him into a star, you can't keep him. If you keep him, you can't afford him.

"You're damned if you do, damned if you don't."

Espo hits another milestone

By The Canadian Press

The achievements have come without much fanfare for Phil Esposito.

Earlier this season, the centre for New York Rangers recorded the 1,500th point of his National Hockey League career. On Feb. 2, the 38-year-old scored his 700th regular-season goal.

And Wednesday night, when he tipped a Dave Maloney shot past Colorado goalie Hardy Astrom during a third-period power play, Esposito reached the 30-goal plateau for the 13th consecutive season.

His goal capped a 6-0 victory over the Rockies, the Rangers' seventh triumph in the last eight games. As usual, the 17-year veteran was treated to a robust ovation; but there was no celebration later.

Esposito said he didn't mind in the least. It was just another milestone, he said.

He said his success will mean more to him later, when he has left the game and can look back on it.

"Athletics is a lot like painting," he said. "A guy doesn't get appreciated until he's dead.

"Good hockey people know, I know, my wife and my dad know the good things I've done."

One of the good things he did Wednesday was tie Bobby Hull for most seasons with 30 or more goals. Hull also reached the plateau in consecutive seasons, then went to the World Hockey Association and added four seasons of at least 50 goals.

Another of the good things he did was centre two lines, taking a shift between left winger Don Maloney and right winger Dean Talafous, then working on line with Ray Markham and newcomer Cam Connor.

Did he like the extra work?

"Does Internal Revenue like my tax returns?" he replied with a question.

There seems to be a lot of good feeling around the Rangers these days. Goalie John Davidson, who stopped 27 shots to record his second shutout of the season, has won his last eight starts. Centre Ulf Nilsson, who missed 27 games with a nerve injury in his neck, added three assists as Colorado suffered its eighth loss in nine games.

In other games it was: Montreal Canadiens 4 Minnesota North Stars 3; Edmonton Oilers 6 Quebec Nordiques 3; Buffalo Sabres 3 Winnipeg Jets 3; St. Louis Blues 3 Toronto Maple Leafs 2; Hartford Whalers 4 Detroit Red Wings 4; Chicago Black Hawks 6 Philadelphia Flyers 6; Pittsburgh Penguins 4 Los Angeles Kings 2, and Washington Capitals 6 Boston Bruins 4.

Montreal got goals from Rod Langway and Mario Tremblay in the final three minutes to beat Minnesota. games for Montreal.

"It's a shame we had to battle and battle like that and not get anything out of it," said Minnesota coach Glen Sonmor, who had eight first-year players in the lineup due to a rash of injuries.

Ron Low, traded Monday by Quebec to Edmonton for centre Ron Chipperfield, faced 45 shots in Edmonton's triumph over Quebec.

Rookie sensation Wayne Gretzky — with his 40th and 41st of the season — scored a pair for Oilers.

"This is a great young team in Edmonton, with a lot of hustle," said Low. "We are healthy and I think we can make the playoffs. Overall I feel just great right now."

St. Louis took a 3-1 lead on a pair of goals by Wayne Babych and one by Chuck Lefley and then held off a late Toronto surge for the victory. Wilf Paiement and Darryl Sittler scored for the Leafs.

Sittlers' goal marked the seventh consecutive season he has reached the 35-goal plateau.

An otherwise glum crowd went into hysterics with six minutes left in the game when a male spectator leaped the boards and, clad only in socks, trotted through the Leafs' zone carrying a sign praising the Leafs as No. 1. He was on the ice less than a minute before two police officers escorted him to an exit.

It took a third period goal by Danny Gare, his second power-play goal of the game, to enable Buffalo to tie Winnipeg.

Bobby Hull scored once and assisted on another goal as Hartford earned its tie with Detroit.

Ron Sedlbauer and Rich Preston both scored two goals to give Chicago its tie with Philadelphia and extend the Black Hawks' undefeated streak to six games.

Ryan Walter scored one goal and assisted on two others to lead Washington over Boston, keeping the Capitals playoff hopes alive.

Rookie Paul Marshall scored with 1:59 remaining and goaltender Nick Ricci posted his first NHL win as Pittsburgh defeated Los Angeles, sending the Kings to their seventh defeat in the last nine games. Kings' Marcel Dionne scored his 50th goal and Charlie Simmer got his 49th.

Skaters reach top five

DORTMUND, West Germany (CP) — It has taken four years but the Canadian ice dance team of Lorna Wighton of Toronto and John Dowding of Oakville, Ont., have finally hit the top five at the world figure skating championships.

Wighton, 20, and Dowding, 21, were fifth behind the Soviet Union's team of Natalia Linichuk and Gennadi Karponsov after the first two compulsory dances Wednesday.

However, a chance at a medal in the event which ends Friday appears slim.

Linichuk and Karponsov led with 11 ordinals and 40.64 points. The Hungarian duo of Krisztina Regoczy and Andras Sallay were second with 19-39.12 and the British team of Jayne Torvill and Chris Dean stood third with 28-39.04.

The Soviet pair of Irina Moiseyeva and Andrei Minenkov were a close fourth at 29-38.84 while Wighton and Dowding had 42-37.96.

The second Canadian ice dance duo — Marie McNeil and Robert McCall of Halifax — were 13th of 16 competitors.

Meanwhile, Barbara Underhill of Oshawa, Ont., and Paul Martini of Woodbridge, Ont., just missed finishing in the top 10 of the pairs event.

The event was won by Marina Cherkasova and Sergei Shakrai of the Soviet Union with 10-144.64. Manuela Mager and Uwe Bewersdorf of East Germany were second with 20-142.92. Soviets Marina Pestova and Stanisloav Leonovich were third at 25-141.08.

Robin Cousins, British Olympic gold medallist, staged a comeback in the men's event by winning the short program to move into third place.

Jan Hoffman of East Germany still leads the event with 10 ordinals and 85.84 points while American David Santee was a close second at 18-84.16.

Brian Pockar of Calgary retained his 10th place standings at 89-73.96.

Stenmark, who else? captures sixth slalom

SAALBACH, Austria (CP-AP) — Ingemar Stenmark, the superstar of Alpine skiing, won his sixth World Cup giant slalom race of the season and in a career studded with no less than 51 Cup victories.

"Stenmark, who else?" the Austrian press agency headlined its report of the season's final Cup giant slalom.

The blonde Swede beat his closest rival, 17-year-old Joel Gaspoz of Switzerland, by a whopping 1.55 seconds. He posted the fastest times in both heats for a winning total of two minutes, 37.23 seconds.

Stenmark failed to recapture the World Cup for best over-all performance because of reluctance to compete in downhill events. But he was uncontested GS Cup champion.

Under the complicated World Cup points system Stenmark amassed the maximum total of 200 points from slalom and giant slalom races.

Andreas Wenzel of Lichtenstein established himself recently as the 1980 men's over-all Cup winner.

Peter Monod of Banff, Alta., had the best Canadian placing — 38th in the field of 86 — with an aggregate time of 2:45.21. He was 52nd fastest on the first run and 25th fastest the second time through the course.

Hot Manitoba rink wins sixth straight

Times News Services

Mert Thompsett doesn't usually show much emotion after winning, but Wednesday, after he and his Winnipeg rink had put on a show of near perfect curling in Kitchener, Ont., to beat Denmark 9-3 in the world junior men's championship, he did enthuse "we were fresh and raring to go."

And go they did, right through their sixth straight victory that keeps them in first place in the round-robin bonspiel.

Thompsett's rink curled 95 per cent in their important win over the team that had gone into Wednesday with just one loss.

The event remains tight although Canada is almost assured of a playoff spot. The high-flying Scottish rink and the United States are tied for second with five wins and one loss.

At Charlottetown, Manitoba's Shannon Affleck of Winnipeg moved into first place after the ninth round of the Canadian junior women's championship while Victoria's Lana Lacheur, skipping the B.C. representatives, remaining in contention with a pair of victories.

Affleck enjoyed a 14-3 romp over the Northwest Territories and improved her won-lost record to 7-2.

Lacheur improved her record to 5-3 by clipping the host Charlottetown rink skipped by Nancy Cameron 6-5 after a 10-2 romp over Newfoundland.

Al Dusseault of Yellowknife, N.W.T., used his deadly takeout to slay his second giant in as many days, knocking New Brunswick from the lead of the Canadian senior men's championships at Saint John. Dusseault, who gave Wendell MacDonald of Charlottetown, P.E.I, his first loss on Tuesday, trounced leader Cedric Allaby of New Brunswick 9-1.

Mac White of Burlington, Ont., pushed P.E.I. further along its downhill slide with an 8-4 win in the ninth draw. Terry McGeary of Moose Jaw, Sask., bolstered his leading position and tarnished the Islanders further with an 8-7 victory in the 10th round.

Meanwhile, the B.C. rink skipped by Glen Harper of Duncan came up with a split on the day and dropped to 3-4. Harper beat Quebec 11-4 after dropping an 8-5 decision to Ralph Atwill of St. John's that gave Newfoundland its first victory.

Saskatchewan continued to lead after seven rounds of the Canadian police championships at North Bay, Ont. Norm Gilbertson's Saskatoon rink ran its record to 7-0. British Columbia was 4-3.

Mel Jordan of Vulcan, Alta., earned his sixth consecutive win in the Royal Canadian Legion championship at Camrose, Alta., with a 7-4 victory over Ron Regnoldson of Craik, Sask.

British Columbia, skipped by Fred Duncan of Port Alberni, was at 2-4 after splitting a pair Wednesday. Duncan lost 10-9 on an extra end to New Brunswick's Bob McNee after beating Quebec 9-4.

Busy Cougars hail farmhands

Victoria Cougars are bringing in extra bodies for their busy stretch run.

The Western Hockey League club, in a stretch that will see Cougars play seven games in 10 days, have recalled two players from Sherwood Park Crusaders of the Alberta Junior League.

Scheduled to report today are Jerry Heikkila, a 17-year-old defenceman who played one game with the Cougars earlier this season, and Stu Kulak, a 16-year-old rightwinger.

Neither, however, is expected to suit up tonight when the Cougars entertain Seattle Breakers in their annual "fan appreciation night" game at Memorial Arena. Tonight's game has been rescheduled from March 25.

Kulak is expected to play Saturday when Cougars face Billings Bighorns here and again Sunday in New Westminster. Coach Jack Shupe said the youngster then will return to Alberta. Heikkila, however, will remain with the Cougars for the balance of the season.

Cougars, also scheduled to face Medicine Hat Tigers, Portland Winter Hawks and Seattle on successive nights next week, trail the West Division-leading Portland Winter Hawks by seven points but have four games in hand.

In games Wednesday, Regina Pats defeated Saskatoon Blades 8-3 and the Tigers beat Lethbridge Broncos 8-2. The setbacks kept Saskatoon and Lethbridge in a deadlock for the sixth and final playoff berth in the East Division.

In another development, New Westminster has sent defenceman Bruce Howes to Kalamazoo (Mich.) K-Wings of the International League for the balance of the season. Howes signed as an underage free agent after attending Detroit Red Wings' camp last fall.

Following is the Western Division playoff schedule:

Mar. 26 — Seattle at Port.
27 - Portland at Sea.
29 — Port. at Vict.
31 — Sea. at Victoria
April 1 — Port. at Sea.
2 — Victoria at Port.
4 — Sea. at Victoria
5 — Victoria at Port.
6 — Victoria at Sea.
7 — Seattle at Port.
8 — Port. at Victoria
10 — Victoria at Sea.

Tonight in sports

Rugby and hockey are on tap for live-action sports fans tonight while basketball and figure skating are centre-stage for television viewers.

Play in the inaugural UVic international universities rugby tournament opened earlier today and continues at 5 at Centennial Stadium and at 6 and 7:30 at the McCoy Road field.

Victoria Cougars take on Seattle Breakers in a Western Hockey League game at 8 in Memorial Arena.

At Pearkes Arena, Juan de Fuca Merchants and Victoria Athletics square off at 8:30 in the opening game of the best-of-five South Island Big Six Hockey League playoff final.

Television addicts can watch the National Invitational Basketball Tournament at 8 on Channel 11.

Coverage of the world figure skating championships starts at 8:30 on Channel 8.

He runs for vodka and Cayman Islands

LONDON (AP) — Nick Akers, British-born distance runner, has announced he has changed his name to Nick Vladivar and is being sponsored by the Vladivar vodka company to compete in the Moscow Olympics,

Akers, 24, who lives in Edmonton, said he plans to compete for the Cayman Islands because he once lived there for seven months and is qualified for the islands' team.

This kind of sponsorship breaks new ground. No athlete has been known to adopt a commercial name before.

A spokesman of Vladivar — a British firm that adopted a Russian name but has no connection with the Soviet Union — said the sponsorship money will be paid to the Cayman Islands National Olympic Committee, and the company therefore will stay inside Olympic rules.

"A change of name means nothing to me," Vladivar said. "It gives me a chance I would not have had otherwise.

"Some people may now question my amateur status, but I am getting no money out of this. Everything is going through the Cayman Islands Olympic Committee, which will pay for all my travel."

The International Olympic Committee (IOC), once the militant guardian of pure amateurism in sport, relaxed its eligibility rules in 1975 and allowed commercial sponsorship, But it insisted that sponsors pay their money to the athlete's sports federation or National Olympic Committee and not to the athlete himself.

The Vladivar case could set a puzzle for the IOC and the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF), which is responsible for deciding who is eligible in the Olympic track and field events.

The Olympic Charter says: "A competitor must not ... have allowed his person, name, picture or sports performance to be used for advertising, except when his or her international federation, National Olympic Committee or national federation enters into a contract for sponsorship of equipment."

The rules say nothing about athletes changing their name legally to the name of their sponsor.

"I discussed this with the Cayman Islands Olympic Committee and they had no objection," Vladivar said.

Vladivar's best time for the 10,000 metres is 29:36.0 — two minutes 14 seconds outside the world record of Kenya's Henry Rono. He admitted he has no chance of a medal in Moscow.

He never has yet made Olympic qualifying time, but if he is the only entrant from the Cayman Islands in the 10,000 metres or the marathon he will be allowed to compete anyway.

Nanaimo still alive

VANCOUVER — When the smoke cleared, Nanaimo Islanders were the only Vancouver Island representative still alive after Wednesday's opening round of the British Columbia high school "AA" boys' basketball championship at Pacific Coliseum.

Islanders, the No. 1 Island team and second ranked in the province, tripped seventh-ranked McNair Marlins 53-40 to advance to a quarter-final game against Gladstone Gladiators at 4 today.

Gladiators advanced with a 75-71 win over Vernon Panthers.

In other games, Duchess Park Condors of Prince George downed Courtenay Towhees 83-46, Steveston Packers dropped Cowichan Thunderbirds of Duncan, 74-61, Centennial Centaurs topped Trail 86-69, Handsworth Royals edged Abbotsford 62-61 and North Surrey bombed Prince Rupert, 92-57.

Merchants edge Leafs

Juan de Fuca Merchants advanced to the South Island Big Six Hockey League playoff final by the closest of margins Wednesday after notching a 3-2 win over Esquimalt Maple Leafs at Juan de Fuca Arena in the last game of a best-of-five semi-final series.

Each team finished the series with a 2-2-1 record but Merchants earned the nod on the basis of a better scoring record.

The best-of-five final series between Merchants and Victoria Athletics gets underway at 8:30 tonight in Pearkes Arena.

Bill Guthrie set the pace for Merchants in the last game with two goals and Steve Berry added a single. Rugs Pritchard and Gerry Caldwell replied for Leafs.

Goaltender Vic Mali blocked 37 shots for Juan de Fuca, which trailed 1-0 after the first period but bounced back to take a 2-1 lead going into the final 20 minutes. Reg Wonnenberg made 14 saves for Leafs.

Turney-Loos named to men's all-star team

CALGARY — Bill Turney-Loos has been named to the 1979-80 Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union men's all-star basketball team.

The University of Victoria Vikings' guard was joined on the all-star team by guard Mike Hazard of Acadia, guard Fred Lee of Brandon and guard Dave Coulthard and forward Bo Pelech, both of York.

Named to the second team were forward Jerry Abernathy of Brandon, guard Dave Zanatta of Lakehead, forward Ted Upshaw of Acadia, forward Bob Nagel of Winnipeg, and forward Perry Markovich of Lethbridge.

Jerry Hemmings of Brandon Bobcats was named coach of the year.

Hazard was named the 1979-80 recipient of the Mike Moser Memorial Award, presented annually to the outstanding male basketball player at a CIAU institution.

All selections were made on the basis of a ballot of all CIAU men's basketball coaches.

The men's championship tournament was scheduled to start today with Vikings set to square off with York in one of the opening games.

Vagabonds ahead on tour

Vagabonds, the Vancouver Island representative cricket side, earned one victory and a draw on the first leg of a tour of New Zealand and Australia.

The Island side tripped Tauranga and District Cricket Club by 56 runs and played to a draw with New Zealand Navy before leaving for Australia.

Tauanga scored 100 and Vagabonds came back with 156 for six. Dave Clarke led Vagabonds with 36 runs and Island bowlers were led by Alan Carter (three for six), Alan Rees (three for 18) and Anton larson (two for 17).

Frank Jarman scored 81 as Vagabonds rang up 196 for six declared against Navy. At close of play the Navy squad had 135 for seven.

Ossie Belle took four for 15 to lead the Vagabond bowlers.

The touring club returns to Victoria on March 28.

FBI probing racing team

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — The FBI says it is investigating members of NASCAR driver Joe Millikan's field team in connection with interstate transportation of stolen vehicels.

Millikan and L. G. DeWitt, president of the North Carolina Motor Speedway and owner of the field team that works on Millikan's car, have confirmed the investigation but declined to discuss it.

FBI agent Howard C. Burgin has confirmed that members of Millikan's team are involved in the investigation.

Collins human after all

FALUN, Sweden (Reuter) — Steve Collins of Thunder Bay, Ont., who set a world record while winning a 90-metre ski jumping competition on Sunday, could fare no better than a 22nd placing in a World Cup competition on Tuesday.

Collins, 15, earned 226.3 points in the World Cup event to finish well back of Finland's Juokko Toermaenen, who compiled 256.6 points.

Toermaenen, the Olympic gold medalist, recorded jumps of 88 and 87 metres.

The length of Collins jumps was unavailable.

Hendersons whip Ivys

Quinn Groenhyde and Chris Trumpy formed a potent one-two punch Wednesday to lead Henderson Realty to a 106-74 decision over Strathcona Ivy's in a Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League game at S.J. Willis Junior High School.

Groenhyde scored 35 points and Trumpy added 30 while Grant Boland and John Burrows each scored 20 for Ivy's.

The win boosted Henderson's record to 19-2.

Cycle stars open camp on Saturday

National cycling coach Norman Sheil arrived in Victoria Wednesday to prepare for the opening a Canadian training camp Saturday at Shawnigan Lake.

The Ottawa-based coach expects to to have 43 athletes at the camp, among them a group of six women that includes Dawne Deeley of Vancouver.

Also scheduled for training chores until the camp closes on March 29 are Bernie Willock of Victoria, Pierre Harvey and Norm St. Aubyn, both of Quebec, and Ontario rider Eon D'Ornellas, who combined to win a bronze medaL in the team time trial at last year's Pan-American Games.

Other standouts include Gordon Singleton of Niagara Falls, winner of two events at the Pan-Am Games and a silver medal at the 1979 world championships, and Gary Trevisiol, who finished sixth in the world championship points race.

With British Columbians are Michel Peron and Chris Cooney of Victoria, former-Victorian Tom Morris, now a Vancouver resident, and national cyclo-cross champion Ron Joostema of Vancouver.

Greg not jumping for joy: leg in cast, fingers crossed

VANCOUVER (CP) — High jumper Greg Joy of Vancouver has his right leg in a cast and his fingers crossed these days.

Joy underwent an operation last week to repair a ruptured Achilles bursa sac, setting back his training program for the 1980 Summer Olympics.

The 23-year-old jumper won a silver medal for Canada in the 1976 Olympics in Montreal and had been training in Long Beach, Calif., with U.S. high jumper Dwight Stones.

Joy had his surgery at Inglewood, Calif., and hopes to resume training in five weeks. He will be in a cast for at least two weeks and require another three weeks of rest.

Italians repeat victory in six-day bicycle race

MONTREAL (CP) — The Italian team of Willy Debosscher and Pietro Algeri captured the six-day bike races at the Velodrome for the second year in a row, outlasting a pair of determined squads from the Netherlands.

Debosscher and Algeri, who trailed until the third day of competition, accumulated 246 points in the sprints during their winning effort. The Netherlands team of Gergben Karstens and Martin Venix followed one lap behind but had just 84 points in the sprint competition.

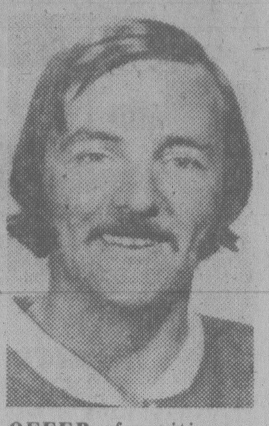
The Canadian team, comprised of Toronto's Jocelyn Lovell and Gordon Singleton of Niagara Falls, Ont., topped the field with 283 points in the sprints but finished 30 laps behind the leaders in the 14th and final position.

The Quebec entry of Claude Langlois and Martin Rietveldt came 12th and recorded 258 points in the sprints.

Dallas added to NBA family

CHICAGO (AP) — Dallas has been awarded a National Basketball Association franchise for the 1980-81 season, prompting a realignment of teams in both the Eastern and Western Conferences.

The realignment means the Midwest and Pacific divisions will go from five to six conference members, as will the Central Division. The Atlantic Division will remain the only one with five teams.



OFFER of position as coach for four years with Geneva-Servette of Switzerland's B division hockey league has been accepted by Jean-Claude Tremblay, former defenceman with Montreal Canadiens and Quebec Nordiques, according to Swiss newspaper reports. With Montreal for 11 seasons and with Quebec for seven, Tremblay will also play if injury-prone ankle permits.

LPGA LEADERS

NEW YORK (AP) — Money leaders on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour:

1. JoAnne Carner, $50,386, 2. Sandra Post, $23,212, 3. Debbie Massey, $22,100, 4. Jane Blalock, $20,676, 5. Beth Daniel, $18,608, 6. Jerilyn Britz, $18,405, 7. Amy Alcott, $17,982, 8. Donna Caponi Young, $17,407, 9. Jan Stephenson, $17,152, 10. Pat Bradley, $15,957.

Klein, Yawkey in vets hall

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The late Chuck Klein, who batted .320 and hit 300 home runs with Philadelphia Phillies from 1928 through 1944, and Tom Yawkey, the late owner of Boston Red Sox, were named to the Hall of Fame today by the Veterans Committee.

They will be inducted in the Hall Aug. 3 with Duke Snider and Al Kaline, who were elected earlier by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Johnny Mize, former St. Louis Cardinals, New York Giants and New York Yankees slugger, was the closest of the finalists failing to be named by the Oldtimers Committee. Other finalists, were Charlie Grimm, Jimmy Dykes, Glen Wright, Walter Alston and Vic Willis, who pitched at the turn of the century.

Klein, who died at of age 54, won the National League's Triple Crown in 1933 when he hit .368, had 28 home runs and drove in 120 runs with the Phillies. He also batted .356 in 1929 and .386 in 1930 with the Phillies.

He was the National League's most valuable player in 1932 when he hit .348, with 38 homers and 137 RBI for the Phillies with whom he spent most of his career.

Yawkey, who died in July of 1976 in Boston at age of 73, was one of the orginal big spenders in baseball.

In Feb, 1933, four days after his 30th birthday, he bought the Red Sox for $1 million. In the previous 11 years, the club had finished last nine times and never higher than sixth. Yawkey immediately started to rebuild Fenway Park and strengthen his team with such additions as Lefty Grove, Jimmy Foxx, Joe Cronin and Rick Ferrell.

Davis fights to switch

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — An embattled Al Davis says he will continue to fight to switch his Oakland Raiders to Los Angeles despite the overwhelming vote against the move by the National Football League owners.

"The vote was anticipated, expected and orchestrated," said the Raiders' managing general partner.

"What we had was a business conspiracy done to keep a record for the present court cases and ones expected in the future."

Arsenal and Liverpool to clash in Cup semis

LONDON (Reuter) — Arsenal has been drawn against Liverpool, league champion and current leader, for the semi-finals of England's Football Association Cup soccer competition:

Liverpool, which ousted Tottenham in London Saturday, will be in its 13th semi-final, Arsenal its 15th.

The other semi-final brings together the less fashionable half of the London-Merseyside contest that the Cup has this year become. Everton, which shocked Ipswich in the quarter-finals, faces second division West Ham.

Everton, currently struggling in the First Division's relegation zone, has a formidable Cup record. It has reached the semi-finals 18 times, the final 10 times.

No Ed without Johnny

scott's world
by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Will Johnny Carson leave NBC this season, or will he continue to star on the Tonight Show with more money and fewer weekly appearances and longer vacations?

Nobody at the network knows for sure. The lawyers on both sides aren't talking. Perhaps Carson himself has not made up his mind.

But one thing is for sure — if and when Johnny decamps, so will Ed McMahon.

The big Irishman, unlike Johnny, is right up front with his future plans.

"I'm staying with Johnny as long as he's on the show," said Ed.

Johnny's longtime sidekick was dieting on steak and sliced apple in the posh Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills hotel. His pretty wife of four years, Victoria, sat beside him enjoying the same lunch.

'Watering down the magic'

"There's no point doing the show with anyone else. I've heard talk about John Davidson or Burt Reynolds replacing Johnny. They're both good friends of mine, but it wouldn't make any difference. I simply wouldn't remain on the show even if they asked me.

"I think it would be watering down some of the magic that has endured between me and Johnny for 18 years of bantering back and forth.

"I've been Johnny's pal, his man Friday, his right hand, his second banana, cohort and sometimes devil's advocate. And it worked for us. Lightning doesn't strike twice in this life.

"Anyhow, I'm starting a new monthly show of my own, the first variety series ever made specifically for 'feevee' — that's pay TV."

McMahon will become a top banana in his own right as host of Ed McMahon and Company under the production aegis of Wescom to be sold and distributed by Showtime, hopefully to most of the 620 cable or pay TV systems operating in various sections of the country.

"We're going to tape the variety show in Las Vegas on Saturday afternoons on stage at one of the big hotels. We'll rehearse at nights here in Hollywood so my days will be free for movie assignments.

"Our first show will be taped May 17 and May 18 in Dallas for the National Cable Television Association convention. We want all the pay TV owners to see what we hope is a very different concept in variety programs.

"To begin with, the show will be 75 minutes long. The format will be me, as host, singing and doing comedy in sketches and even a little dancing. I'll do some comic monologues as well.

"There'll also be a little theme to hold the show together. We're aiming high with plans for mini-concerts with special musical guests and small treatises on celebrities included in the over-all program.

Sophisticated but not blue

"Because there won't be any network censorship, the show will be considerably more sophisticated than what is generally seen on the tube. It won't be blue, of course, but it will be risque."

Ed would dearly love to have Carson tape the opening for his first show with a hearty "Here's Eddddd," a reversal of Ed's own introduction of Johnny over the years.

The big man says he's not intimidated by the prospect of carrying an expensive variety show on his own broad shoulders.

"Don't forget I played Las Vegas with my own act for five years," he said. "And I've hosted several specials, the Thanksgiving Day parade and The Kraft Music Hall back in the summer of 1968."

Ballet version of Newcomers bankrolled

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. has commissioned Brian Macdonald of Montreal to create a major 40-minute work for the National Ballet of Canada based on Imperial's award-winning television series, The Newcomers.

The new ballet, to cost Imperial $80,000, will use music by composers Andre Prevost, Harry Freedman and John Weinzweig which is already in the standard repertory of Canadian music, and a new work and connecting themes by Lothar Klein.

Karen Kain, Frank Augustyn, Veronica Tennant and Mary Jago will lead a National Ballet company of about 40 dancers in performances this fall, and probably later on tour across the country.

Announcing the project Wednesday, both the National Ballet and Imperial declared there were no strings attached to the commission other than their joint desire that the new ballet should employ Canadian artists.

Macdonald, resident choreographer of Les Grands Ballets Canadiens in Montreal, said he chose the TV series as the theme of his work, which will simply be called Newcomers.

Rather than take any particular story out of the history of Canadian settlement, told in seven TV specials which are about to be repeated on CBC-TV, he said he will present an abstract story.

It will be a recounting, in music and dance, of "how freightening it is to leave home and put yourself into new circumstances, into new situations."

The Newcomers TV series, which won last year's first Financial Post Award for corporate support of the arts, was based on historical research.

Newscaster DePoe dies

TORONTO (CP) — "When I die," said Norman DePoe in 1976, "I just want the words 'he was a good reporter' on my tombstone."

Few Canadians would object to the epitaph. The long-time CBC-TV news commentator was known for his gravelly voice, bushy moustache and seersucker suits. But most of all, it was his sophisticated blend of reporting and analysis that earned him his reputation.

DePoe died today in hospital at 62. He had been in intensive care for several weeks suffering from internal problems.

Between 1960, when he was appointed Ottawa correspondent for CBC-TV, and his retirement in 1978, DePoe brought flair to his handling of most of the major Canadian and international news stories the network covered.

Among other crucial events, his raspy voice provided commentary on the Washington Freedom March in 1964, Sir Winston Churchill's funeral and the political conventions that made Lester Pearson and John Diefenbaker party leaders. He covered 31 elections.

His distinctive voice, he said, developed during a rehersal for a press gallery party in Ottawa in the early 1960s.

"There was some drinking, a lot of smoking and plenty of singing and I lost my voice. It never did come back."

His great capacity and affection for liquor also characterized DePoe's career, though he said it was overplayed. Only on rare occasions, such as when he covered a Conservative convention, did it interfere with his performance.

DePoe was born in Portland, Ore., and moved to Vancouver when he was six years old. He was a student at the University of British Columbia during the 1930s, a time he described himself as being "wild and left-winged."

In 1948, he took a part-time job at the news desk of CBC radio and later dropped the final year of an honors course to make journalism a full-time career.

He is survived by his wife, Mary, and seven children.

"Johnny on the Spot," a receptionist answers in a Lewiston, N.Y., office. So does a receptionist in St. Catherines, Ontario. Their boss, William Reynolds, apparently thought he had come up with a catchy phrase when he decided to register "Here's Johnny" as a trademark for the portable outhouses he manufactures. Johnny Carson, the host of the Tonight Show, disagreed. Before rendering his decision, a federal judge in Canada was told that 63 per cent of those polled in a random survey had associated "Here's Johnny" with the television talk show. In the U.S., Justice Patrick Mahoney agreed and ruled that "Here's Johnny" could not be registered as a trademark without Carson's permission.

A Norfolk man has pleaded guilty to disturbing the peace by throwing a nude hot tub party in his backyard. Drew Terry, who once vowed to fight the charge, changed his mind and was fined $75. Two other hot tub enthusiasts were also convicted and fined $30. Terry said the $75 fine was a pittance compared to the money he must spend to enjoy his hot tub in the future. "They (city officials) claim it is a swimming pool and it'll cost me another $2,000 to bring it into compliance with the city's code," Terry said. The vice squad raided Terry's nude party Nov. 16 because a neighbor complained that he could see naked women in the tub from the third floor of his house.

Boston Trade School English teacher Carol Labonte thought she was being satirical when she distributed a handout urging students to use a certain four-letter word more often. But the Boston School Committee was not amused, and handed her a five-day suspension. A school official said the handout listed the many ways in which the four-letter word could be used — to express "pain, pleasure, hate and love" or to indicate "fraud, ignorance, trouble, aggression, displeasure, difficulty, incompetence, suspicion, enjoyment, request and hostility." The handout urged students to used the word "more often in your daily speech," because it "adds to your prestige." Roger Beattie, school board superintendent, said Labonte told him and two other school officials she issued the handout because "it is a serious problem among students who usually use these types of words when addressing her, and they do not know the meaning of the words."

Dear Abby:

You recently published a letter from the mother of a Mongoloid child in which she refers to him as "exceptional" and "special." I must thank you for printing such letters, since they always give me a good laugh.

Imagine having the gall to use words describing excellence, superiority and noteworthiness in reference to people with mental and physicl deficiencies.

William Anderson

Dear Mr. Anderson:

My Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary defines "exceptional" as "forming an exception: rare." Also, "better than average," and "below" average.

And "special" is defined as "that which is distinguished by some unusual quality; being other than usual; unique."

I am always pleased when a reader "gets a good laugh" from something in my column, but the letter I published about the Down's-Syndrome (please, not "Mongoloid") child was not meant to be amusing. Furthermore, what gives you a good laugh strikes me as being funny — meaning "different from the ordinary." And more than a little cruel.

Dear Abby:

My daughter is engaged to marry a young man she went with all through high school. (She is 21 and he is 22.) He went overseas, but was sent home before his hitch was up because he had been having "blackouts." He spent several months in the hospital under observation, and was then discharged, but he still sees a psychiatrist once a month at the hospital here.

My daughter told me he has struck her several times lately. She said last night he slapped her hard across the mouth because she disagreed with him on some small thing. He cried and apologized afterward so she forgave him.

What worries me is that after they are married I am afraid of what he may do to her.

I don't like to interfere, but I can't let my daughter make what could be a serious mistake. Should I contact the boy's doctor and ask him some questions? Please give me some advice.

Concerned

Dear Concerned:

Your daughter should postpone her marriage. She should ask to accompany her fiance on his next visit to the doctor, and together they should get a complete report on his condition and the prognosis. No girl should marry a man she is afraid of.

Dear Abby:

After 27 years with me, my wife, Phyllis, is reasonably able to cope with weirdos of any stripe. She recently had an encounter with a flasher here at our railroad station.

Confronted by our flasher, raincoat agape, my fashion-conscious wife glanced briefly at the man, than whispered to him, "Sorry, Shorty, I can't read the label on the coat," whereupon he angrily buttoned up and slunk off in a snit.

Holiday Park Golf Course was site of Ski for Light's 5km and 10km races

Blind folk ski for themselves

By LON WOOD

The last leg of the course loops up through a wooded section to a slight hill. They all dig in and some cross-country skiing styles never before seen are developed on the spot.

Up they go, pair by pair — a blind or partially blind skier accompanied by a sighted sidekick.

At the top, a gentle slope where they come into view of the finish line. It's 75 metres away and the cheers from the crowd wash over them — a shock after the trail's stillness.

Down they come — straight, to the left or right, sitting or tumbling but down they come, every one.

Lead poles stab the snow, team members shout, and voices choked with emotion urge the skiers over the last little bit. Some stumble, fall and rise wearily from the snow. The others, spent and drained, push on.

It's over. They have beaten the course. They've won — surrounded by the warmth of friends the tears flow freely.

The scene is Canada's annual Ski for Light cross-country event sponsored by Sons of Norway in the three western provinces.

Last week in Saskatoon, skiers from Victoria competed in the 1980 event and brought home gold and bronze medals.

The six-day Prairie meet included 17 blind skiers from Canada, the U.S. and Norway in competition categories of blind, partially blind, male and female, under 18 years, 18 to 35 and 35 and over.

Four Victoria skiers and three skiing guides took part.

In ladies 35 and over, partially-blind Turi Stephens won a gold medal while Lesley Sadd took a bronze in 18 to 35 ladies totally blind.

"Leslie was beaten out by two skiers from Edmonton and Vancouver who had just returned from their Olympics in Norway," said

Curt Jensen, an organizer of Victoria Ski for Light competition.

Mike Brodsky, another Victoria entrant, was interviewed by CBC TV during the competition and he and Sadd were invited to elementary schools to talk about the whole program.

"It was a marvelous week. The service at the hotel was super. The whole thing — transportation, hotel and everything was very inexpensive when you consider the fun we had," said Brodsky.

"We just stepped out of the hotel and across the street we could ski at Kinsmen Park.

"For working out there was the swimming pool, and a sauna.

"It all wound up with a banquet attended by the Norwegian consul."

The group also made a sidetrip to Radisson — where the town's 400-odd people just treated them royally with a Sons of Norway dinner.

Jim Fleming, who first participated in the program three years ago, was the fourth Victorian to attend the prairie event.

Jensen, a member of the 200-member Sons of Norway Eidsvold No. 53 chapter, helped start a program last October which has seen 13 blind skiers go on regular cross-country outings.

"We started with what we call 'dry training' exercises," Jensen told the Times Wednesday. "Then all winter we've been skiing up around Shawnigan Lake and on Mt. Washington — mostly to prepare for Saskatoon."

Jensen said the group ranges in age from 17 to 70 years.

"The biggest problem is the balance — trying to get them to comprehend speed — that's the main thing, he said. "And a lot of them haven't done much exercise — so they have to firm up leg and arm muscles and so on with the dry exercises.

"Co-ordination is something we have to spend a lot of time on, too. I made up some sticks to simulate as poles and they move them in 'diagonal stride' as it is called. They also have to learn to flex their knees and transfer weight from one leg to another — most of this is the same as for anyone."

To find out how it felt to learn the process without sight, Jensen and the other guides were blindfolded for one session.

"We lost 50 per cent of our balance, to say nothing of other orientations," he said.

The ski project has been run in Canada by Sons of Norway for the past five years. In B.C. there are 18 chapters of the association and there are over 100,000 members in North America.

At the local level Sons of Norway chapters provide boots, skis and instruction to skiers and guides. Blind participants must make up their travel costs.

"We take them out and ski with them all the ski season, said Jensen. "We are always looking for more people — both blind people and guides — who would like to participate."

Jensen, who operates Curt's Custom Tailoring on Blanshard, said in some cases "the blind just pull away from the guide" as far as grasping the cross-country technique goes.

"It is good if the guide has a little bit of experience but it is not important. I have been cross country skier for 10 years and instruct them all a little bit — but most everyone catches on quite fast."

The Sons of Norway plan two or three outings a season and the idea is for the guide and partner to go out on their own as often as they wish. One more trip is set tenatatively for the end of this month to Mt. Washington.

"You know what I find when I'm around the blind person? They can take it more than most others — and that includes lots of joking, too."

Next year Ski for Light will be held in B.C. with Sleipner Lodge No. 8 in Vancouver as host.

Aspirin flunks heart patients survey

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I suffered a heart attack seven months ago. My doctors feel that I've made a splendid recovery. With their help I've lost a considerable amount of weight, I've stopped smoking cigarettes and I've begun a program of exercise.

Now, I'm rather confused. One of my doctors believes that I should be taking aspirin in order to prevent another heart attack. Another doctor thinks it would be a mistake to take aspirin.

R.C.

Dear Mr. C.:

When the idea occurred to scientists that aspirin might be beneficial in the prevention of a second heart attack, there was a great deal of enthusiasm.

It had been known that one of the blood substances, the platelets, played an important role in the formation of clots that blocked off the flow of blood through the coronary artery leading to the heart. It was therefore assumed, theoretically, that any chemical which could prevent the consolidation of platelets in the arteries would be of great value for people with coronary artery disease.

Since aspirin, taken in small doses for a long period of time, is known to prevent the aggregation of platelets, a study was undertaken at the National Institutes for Health to thoroughly evaluate this entire problem.

The prime objective of this project was to determine whether or not the regular administration of aspirin to people who had had at least one documented heart attack (myocardial infarction) would result in a significant reduction in total mortality over a three year period.

Almost 5,000 men and women between the ages of 30 and 69, who had had a previous attack, were kept under careful supervision. About one half of the patients in this study were given one gram of aspirin daily (this is equivalent to three standard aspirin tablets). The rest of the patients received a placebo, or sugar pill, which could not possibly affect the health of those who were taking it.

Neither the doctors nor the patients knew which ones were getting the aspirin. The results of this scientifically controlled study were recently revealed by the Director of this research project, Dr. Robert I. Levy. He stated, "The difference in death rates was not significant between those patients who took the three aspirin a day and those who took the placebo. In fact," Dr. Levy added, "there were slightly more deaths due to recurrent heart attacks in the group that took the aspirin."

It's time for the Fisher wood stoves "Better late than never" sale.

It's our annual "Better late than never" sale on the best wood stoves money can buy. The famous Fisher Stove that can significantly reduce your heat bill is a great buy any time of the year. But here are three very important reasons why it's an even better buy right now.

One. There's still plenty of cool weather ahead. We hate to be the ones to break the news. But March is really a pretty cold month. It comes in like a lion, remember? And those April mornings and nights can be quite chilly. Having a Fisher Stove at this time of year may mean you won't have to use your furnace at all.

Two. Inflation and rising prices. Time to think about some unpleasant subjects. Oil. Rate increases. Shortages. Heat bills. We're not trying to be depressing, just trying to remind you of the sad reality that we face. And think of the mess we may be in by next winter. Set yourself free from these problems. A Fisher Stove uses Canada's renewable energy resource — wood.

Three. We've put Fisher Stoves on sale. Now the good news. The Fisher wood stove that keeps your whole house warm is on sale now. The Fisher wood stove that eases your mind about rising utility rates is on sale for a limited time. So come in now and take advantage of these low prices. Better late than never, right?

Prices in effect until March 31st.

Swap can cut calories

If you enjoy an occasional chocolate bar, liquorice stick or other confection, you may be wise to stop sugaring your cereal or your coffee in order to keep your sweetener intake in sensible bounds.

Just reducing the amount you use in cereal or coffee will help a great deal if done on a consistent basis.

Perhaps you've been told by your doctor to watch those calories because the pounds have been creeping on over the past few years. It doesn't take a huge number of extra calories each day to cause weight gain. Just as few as a 100 extra each day over what you are burning up will cause a 10 pound weight increase over a five year period.

One of the easiest ways to lower your calorie intake is to start reducing the amount of table sugar or high sugar items you each each day.

Although one teaspoon of sugar only has about 18 calories think of the number of cups of coffee or tea you drink each day and the number of teaspoons you add to each cup. Five cups of coffee with just a level teaspoon of sugar adds up to 90 calories a day you really don't need.

Be wary of substituting other sweeteners such as brown sugar, honey or molasses, in an attempt to cut back on sugar and calories.

Brown sugar, and molasses, have almost exactly the same amount of sugar as an equal amount of white sugar. And honey has even more (sixty-five calories per tablespoon) while white sugar has only forty-five.

But if the additional flvorings in these products help you cut down your total sweetener intake, then they may serve some purpose.

If you've decided to go "cold turkey" and stop adding sugar at all, you'll probably discover a whole world of flavors you didn't know or had forgotten existed.

You may be able to satisfy your sweet tooth by using foods, such as fruits, which have some sugars naturally, and by the ingenious use of spices.

There's a whole category of spices referred to as "sweet spice". They are not really sweet themselves but enhance sweetness so that less sugar needs to be added. These include cinnamon, cloves, allspice, nutmeg, mace, ginger, cardamon, anise, coriander seed, bay leaves and mint flakes. Some of these may be obtained in blends such as apple or pumpkin pie spice, and mixed pickling spice.

Check the labels of blends as some contain a small amount of sugar.

The sugar in fruit sauces (apple, pear, and others) may be reduced to half of the usual amount by adding one teaspoon of cinnamon, ground nutmeg, pumpkin pie spice or even a dash of anise.

The sugar in custards may be decreased by at least one half by adding ground nutmeg, or a mixture of cinnamon and cloves. Or try adding a bay leaf.

To cut out the sugar entirely, cook pears with a one-to-one mixture of water and unsweetened orange juice concentrate plus a two-inch piece of cinnamon and a few allspice berries.

When there's a touch of spring try a "sherbet" made with canned, unsweetened pineapple.

Freeze it until solid, whirl it in a blender with ground nutmeg or ginger and serve it with a dash of cinnamon.

Another tasty fruit drink can be made by heating some water with a mixture of whole cinnamon, ginger and allspice.

Add equal parts of unsweetened orange juice concentrate and unsweetened pineapple juice and chill before serving.

Maybe the last things you think you'll ever be able to give up are sweetened coffee or tea.

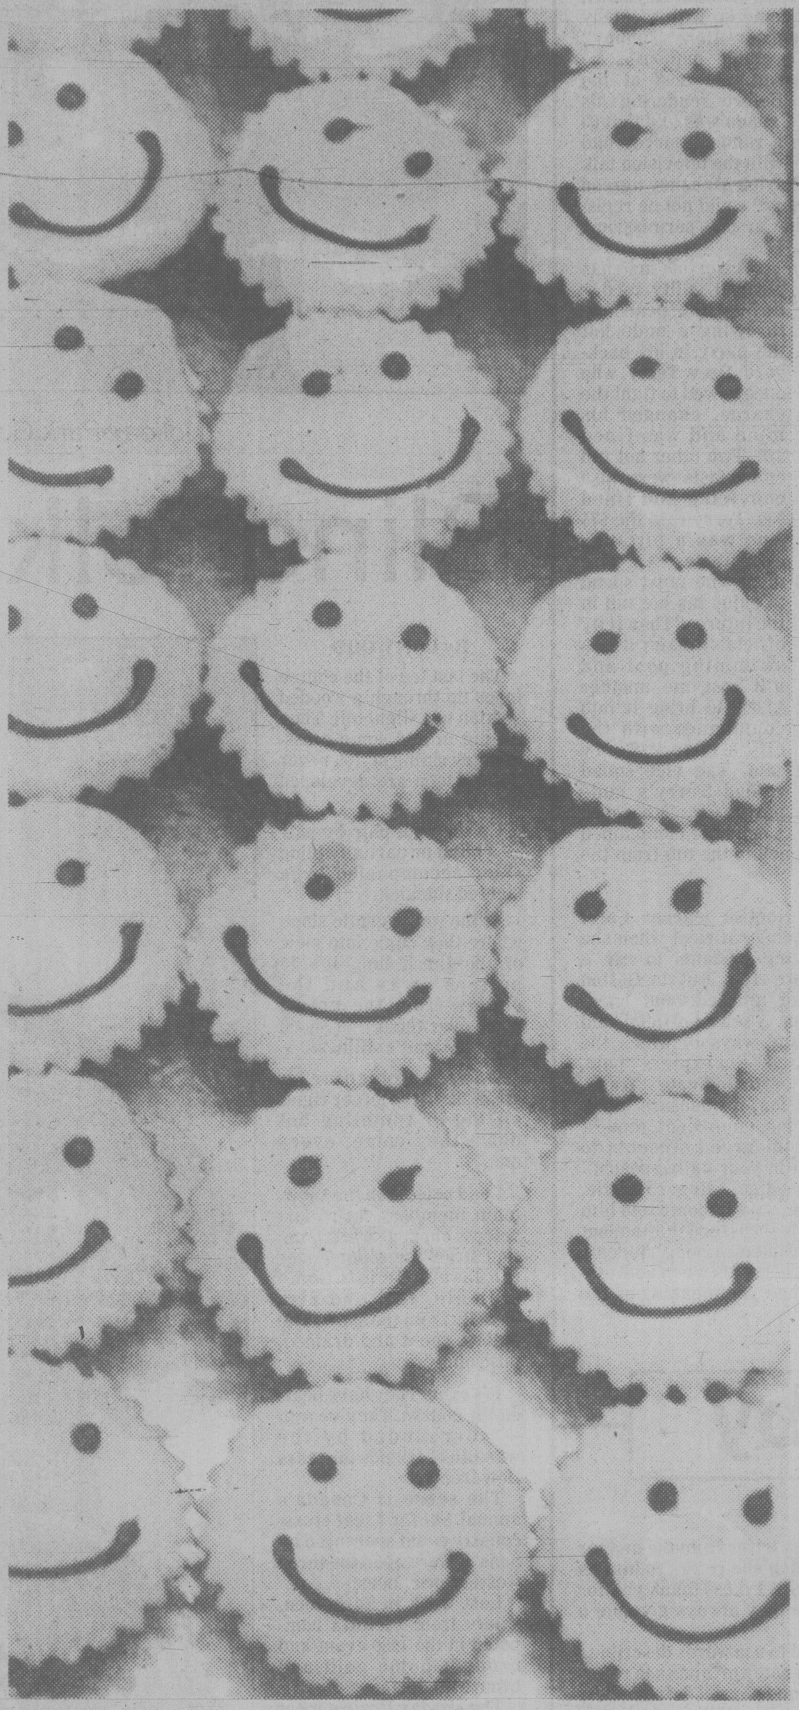
Some lovers of sweetened coffee have been weaned by adding from adding sugar by substituting cinnamon, allspice, cloves or even cardamon seed.

Add these spices to ground coffee when it is perking or dripping. Or use a cinnamon stick as a stirrer. The deciate flavor of mint tea is well known.

Try tea brewed with a few cloves, cloves plus a bit of cinnamon is delicious with little or no sugar.

A good hot drink for cold March days is to put some cloves and cinnamon sticks in the basket of your coffee pot, add apple juice instead of water and perk.

Pre-sweetened cereal or other cereal with sugar generously added is a standard breakfast for many people. Try some whole grain cereal with ground cinnamon or nutmeg plus some sliced fruit instead.



FACING UP to the fact you might have to cut down on your intake of sugar isn't easy when your sweet tooth runs the show. Cutting down in some areas, however, helps a lot and takes the guilt out of continuing to consume in others.

SITTING MEMBER of the Manitoba legislature, June Westbury, washes up in the men's room of the legislative buildings after a session in the provincial house. Westbury uses the men's facility because there no washroom provided there for female MLAs. She brought her male colleagues to task recently at the start of International Women's Week for talking about women's rights while inequality exists right at their own doorstep.

Hospital waiting list agony weighs hard on elderly pair

By PAT DUFOUR

There are 104 long-term care beds in the Comox Valley and 116 persons on the waiting list.

One of those on the list is Mrs. Florence Brown, an intermediate care patient who occupies an acute-care bed on the fifth floor of Victoria's Eric Martin Institute.

She's been on that list since 1977.

She and her husband Percy lived in Victoria for 55 years before she fell at home in June, 1978, and broke her hip.

In August of that year, Brown's failing health forced him to sell the family home and move in with their son-in-law and daughter, Phil and Mary Swanson of Cumberland.

Agonized by what the forced separation is doing to the Browns, who are both almost 80, the Swansons contacted the Times.

"Both Mom and Dad have lost almost all hope. They have been productive residents of B.C. for 55 years. They're not senile and wish only be to able to see and talk to each other," Swanson said.

Mrs. Swanson says her father has been able to get to Victoria to visit his wife six times in the past year.

Glenda Gentleman, long-term care supervisor for the Upper Island Health Unit, says the area has two waiting lists, one for those anticipating future needs, and the other for urgent cases.

Mrs. Brown is seventh on the latter list.

She says expansion of beds in two facilities providing the kind of care Mrs. Brown needs is being planned, one will grow from 50 to 75 beds and the other, from 28 to 75.

But this means no immediate relief for the Browns.

Gentleman says it will be 12 to 16 months before those beds are available.

Meanwhile, says Gentleman, she has persuaded the Swansons to consider having Mrs. Brown moved to a private Cumberland facility, Orchard Manor, which is now covered by the provincial long-term care program.

But Mrs. Swanson says the operator of Orchard Manor told them she already has 10 people on her waiting list.

Gentleman says every person in the long-term care program is entitled to 30 days away from a facility, with the costs of home support, such as homemaker services and home nursing, picked up by the government.

Mrs. Swanson says taking advantage of this service would be of no use to her mother.

"She's incapable of being in a regular home. The doors are not wide enough for her to get through with her walker. She's always wanted to come home. But to bring her home for 30 days then send her back again is the cruellest thing I could imagine. It's inhuman."

Gentleman suggested one way to solve the dilemma would be to locate Mrs. Brown in a Campbell River facility, a 45-minute drive from Cumberland but Mrs. Swanson said there is no way, with a 10-year-old daughter to care for, they could drive every day to Campbell River, or even every other day.

She says her mother at first took the enforced separation better than her husband, being consoled with the friends who could visit her in the hospital.

As the months went by, however, Mrs. Swanson says her mother has declined.

"She's become withdrawn and I'm bitter. The whole situation is dreadful."

The Brown's only other child, a son, is married and living with his family in Calgary.

He phones Cumberland every week, hoping for the breakthrough that never comes.

The elder Brown, according to his daughter, is also showing increasing signs of the stress.

Meanwhile, his lonely wife on the top floor of the EMI, hangs on to the hope that one day they will be at least in the same town again.

Susan Carver and father Bill wait to be wheeled into operating room

Woman picks a winner — a kidney from Dad

EDMONTON (CP) — Early one morning last month, Bill Carver was sedated, placed on his left side and rolled into an operating room at University Hospital in Edmonton.

In an operating room next door, his daughter Susan, also sedated, waited for a special gift.

Like perhaps a dozen other Canadians, Bill donated one of his healthy kidneys, in this case so his 19-year-old daughter might have the chance for a long, normal life. The transplant was successful.

"Susan and I decided long ago she could have one of my kidneys whenever she needed it, and she needs it now," Bill said before the operation. "It's a good kidney and I'm pretty confident it will do the job."

Because of strong drugs administered to prevent rejection of the new kidney by her body, Susan is defenceless against infection and must be confined in a hospital isolation unit until she regains her strength. Doctors hope she can leave within a week.

"I even had to go to the dentist and have any decayed teeth filled because I won't be able to cope with any kind of bacteria," she said.

Born with faulty kidneys, she was under constant medical care, but still got involved in sports in primary school.

"But her last race was in grade 5, and then she went on hypertension drugs," said her father, an amateur track coach.

One failing kidney was removed and replaced in 1978 with a transplant from a cadaver. But the replacement didn't work out and had to be removed within a month.

Susan fought various infections for the next eight months and made frequent trips to hospital.

She turned down another cadaver donation last summer because the success rate of such a transplant is much lower than with a kidney from a live donor.

Her fear of another long period of suffering was compounded by a dwindling number of "shunt" sites, where plastic tubes are inserted in veins and arteries to allow the hemodialysis machine to clean the blood.

"Her long-term prognosis wasn't that great," said kidney expert Dr. Michael Hiigins.

She had to be hooked up to a dialysis machine at home or in hospital for four hours at a time, three times a week, was on a low-salt diet and was limited to half a litre of fluid a day.

Six weeks ago, Susan had her other bad kidney taken out in preparation for the transplant from her father.

Now, doctors say, the new kidney is cleaning her blood better than a machine ever could.

Beeper a sweet-talker

EDMONTON (CP) — Imagine hearing a little beep from your arm telling you there's too much sugar in your blood.

Within seconds, a computer implanted under your skin figures out how much insulin is needed to balance the sugar level, and dispenses it from a small capsule. A boon for diabetics.

The imagined could become a reality sometime in this decade, Dr. J. Stuart Soeldner of Boston told a seminar sponsored by the Canadian Diabetic Association.

Soeldner, associate director of the Harvard-affiliated E. P. Joslin Research Laboratory, said scientists are attempting to perfect an artificial pancreas which would be implanted just under the skin.

Like a natural pancreas, it would produce insulin to counteract excess sugar in the blood.

The projected final model has a radio transmitter to make a sound when too much sugar is in the blood. The artificial pancreas would distribute insulin in a dose determined by the computer, much as the real pancreas does.

There would be a plug in the skin to allow injection of insulin into the insulin tank.

The nearest thing available so far is an insulin pump worn over the skin. It is connected to a catheter protruding from the chest or stomach, and steadily pumps insulin at varying rates. The rate of flow can be controlled to maintain a normal level of blood sugar.

The device is only 14 centimetres long and unobtrusive, Soeldner said. It can be removed for about 30 minutes while bathing or swimming, but can't be used for strenuous sports.

"It's much more convenient than one or two daily injections," Soeldner said.

A computerized pancreas already exists, but it's a big machine hooked up to a computer, and it can't be used more than seven days consecutively.

The first step toward a smaller machine that can be implanted is to come up with a radio transmitter which will fit under the skin and let the diabetic with an external pump know when his sugar level is getting too high, Soeldner said.

The implantable artificial pancreas would come next.

Soeldner said progress is also being made in pancreas transplants.

For the last few years, doctors have shunned them because the surgery is formidable and the rejection rate high.

But now several laboratories are developing a porous plastic sheath to contain the donated organ, Soeldner said.

The sheath would have a skin coarse enough to allow passage of insulin glucose but fine enough to keep out white blood cells which attack foreign organs.

Nickel a ringer for B.C. Tel

The five-cent phone call is alive and well in at least some B.C. Tel pay phones.

The official pay phone price is 10 cents but cheap calls surfaced in New Westminster, when 60 rotary dial phones being converted to touch dial had the wrong circuit cards installed.

Then an unidentified woman revealed she has made nickel calls from virtually every exchange in Vancouver.

"It works every time," she claimed Tuesday.

In Victoria, all the pay phones in the Douglas Hotel and a few in the immediate vicinity work on just five cents.

But pay phones in the Mayfair Mall and the Woolco Plaza as well as a couple in between, didn't work.

Trying to call with five cents got you a male voice saying this was Victoria and the call couldn't be completed.

In several tests in Vancouver Wednesday, B.C. Tel pay phones completed calls for only a nickel.

B.C. Tel officials said they were not aware that a single nickel works in pay phones. One official admitted he had heard of the problem, but added the company doesn't have the manpower to check out every phone booth.

Michael Reigh, B.C. Tel's operations manager for coin telephones, said if a particular problem occurred on any phone in any exchange, every phone in the exchange would be affected.

"We'd have to make some pretty extensive tests from just about every phone in town," he said. "It would take all the men I have."

Reigh said he will discuss the matter with company supervisors.

Tourist booth nearly ready

The long-awaited Trans-Canada Highway tourist booth for the western communties should be open this summer.

Rob Waters, president of the Western Community Chamber of Commerce, told 100 persons at a meeting Tuesday the site is almost ready and only construction of the small booth is awaited.

The chamber has been working on the project for more than two years.

The department of highways prepared the site near the Trans-Canada and Amy Road in Langford, Waters said. This was a big help because it was an $80,000 project.

Local businessman Ed Nixon got the project going by agreeing to lease the small site to the chamber for a nominal fee.

Saanich obstetrics review welcomed

Regional hospital planner Murray Halkett said Wednesday he welcomes the chance to review plans to take obstetrics out of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital when the new Helmcken Road Hospital opens.

He told the Capital Regional District's hospital board the decision to take the unit out of the Saanich hospital was made more than a year ago with the consent of a medical staff representative, and a letter of consent from the board.

But Halkett said he had learned recently the letter was not a true interpretation of the board's position.

Since it became known the unit was to be removed, there had been a lot of opposition, he said.

He made his position known after a bid by all three Saanich Peninsula municipalities to have the hospital and health planning commission reconsider a decision to remove obstetric and pediatric services from the local hospital.

North Saanich alderman Harold Parrott acknowledged there may be danger in high-risk pregnancies being handled at the local hospital but women should have the choice. He said it was bad for pregnant women to have to go into strange surroundings and, perhaps, have a change in doctors.

Sidney mayor Norma Sealey said there had been conflicting stories told about hospital plans. She had been told plans were too far down the road for change but had also been told plans "aren't engraved in stone."

The CRD board decided to ask for reconsideration and a report on the commission's reasons for the decision so directors can debate the matter more knowledgeably.

VDTs checked for hazard

Health Minister Rafe Mair has instructed his ministry staff to investigate concerns that video display terminals (VDTs) being used in the province could be emitting higher than acceptable levels of radiation.

The matter was raised during question period Wednesday by Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster), who said he was concerned that the Teleram model has been found to be suspect.

"This particular brand has been checked in New York and has been found to have a radiation level of about 40 milliwatts at the very top," he said. "Now if somebody leans on that machine and makes a habit of it, I would suggest that it would be relatively dangerous."

The acceptable level of radiation is 10 milliwatts.

Cocke said VDTs — television-like machines with keyboards which transmit type into a computer — are found all over the province.

He said he did not know how many Telerams are in use, but "I gather they're rather popular."

Cocke also said he was concerned that the machines apparently have been taken off the labor ministry's occupational health hazard list.

"If that's case, that means that they're going to be denying any kind of compensation for people that are in that situation and also it means that they won't be inspecting them."

Reporters working in the B.C. Legislative Press Gallery have given their employers until next Wednesday to have all video display terminals (VDTs) in the gallery given a clean bill of health by appropriate authorities or have them switched off.

The action was taken Wednesday after notices were posted in the Sun and Province newsrooms in Vancouver, warning of possible radiation leakage from Teleram 2277 terminals.

VDTs have largely replaced the typewriter for many journalists.

Victoria Press business manager Peter Dorazio said today no trace of radiation was found leaking from VDT's in the Colonist-Times building during an inspection last March.

"There was virtually no rating. Analysis indicated higher radiation in a wristwatch," he said.

Unified contract talks worrying police unions

A move to standardize the police union contracts with the four core Victoria municipalities could cost taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars, according to the president of the Victoria police union.

Bryan Bailey said Wednesday a wide disparity exists in benefits members of the four police departments now receive.

If a single collective agreement is negotiated, then the best benefits must apply to all, he said.

Bailey said the unions want that commitment before they begin negotiations for a new contract with the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

The first meeting with the association was held Wednesday.

Bailey said the unions are concerned about the move to standardize the contracts and are upset GVLRA director Carl Anshelm has been handed the job.

"I think we were all satisfied with the part-time or amateur basis that has been used in negotiating with the police boards up to now," he said. "But the GVLRA is charged to do one thing — negotiate the cheapest possible collective agreement."

Bailey said the union is at a disadvantage because Anshelm is a professional, full-time negotiator. The union's bargainers are not.

He said confrontation is inevitable if Anshelm tries to reduce the benefits to the lowest common denominator.

But it is going to be extremely costly if the highest benefit becomes the standard.

For example, he said, the Victoria police contract entitles members to receive up to 97½ days sick leave pay when they retire or resign after 10 years' service. The other police departments do not.

If all members of the Victoria force with more than 10 years service were to quit tomorrow it would cost the city about $400,000, he said.

If it happened in Saanich the bill would be close to $300,000, he estimated, but of course Saanich doesn't have such a clause in its contract.

On the other hand Victoria policemen do not have free parking. The members of the three other forces do. It would cost the city between $3,000 to $4,000 a month to provide parking, based on the average $20 to $25 a month the 144 city policemen now pay out of their own pockets.

There are other kinds of differences. Victoria, Esquimalt and Oak Bay now have true wage parity with Vancouver. Saanich does not; some rank categories are paid less.

A detective constable receives pay at the rate of corporal in Victoria, but only constable in Saanich.

Saanich, however, has better dental coverage paying 100 per cent of the premiums; the others pay 50 per cent.

Esquimalt has a more lucrative benefit for officers working statutory holidays. It pays triple time if the member works, and double time if the day falls on his regular day off. The other three pay 2½ times if the officer works but nothing if the day falls on a regular day off.

Victoria is the only one of the four that gives compensation to officers who are on 24-hour stand-by or who have special skills.

Members of the Emergency Response Team get an extra $75 a month, identification officers get a bonus of $50 a month, and breathalyzer operators an additional $25.

Victoria is alone in paying $8 a day extra to officers who are assigned as field instructors for new recruits between training blocks at the B.C. Police Academy. Their counterparts in the other departments get nothing for the added responsibility.

Victoria rewards its long-term employees by giving an additional one month paid holiday after 30 years' service, a benefit not enjoyed by the other forces.

Saanich has a termination allowance. Any officer who leaves after five years service gets 12 hours pay for each year he's put in the job. Not so with the only three forces.

Bailey said a standardized contract would likely end up costing Victoria taxpayers less than taxpayers in the other municipalities.

But everyone is going to end up paying more, he said. It's just a question of how much more.

People rescued but not boats

Three sports fishermen learned an expensive lesson on Tuesday afternoon — the Pacific Rescue Centre is not involved in the salvage business.

And they are facing repair bills as high as $4,000 on their 17½-foot runabout.

The boat was swept on to rocks off the Chinese Cemetery below Dallas Road after the boat's outboard motor failed.

In an interview, Ben Powell, one of the fishermen, said he called the centre about 2 p.m. for help in getting the capsized boat off the rocks.

But the centre refused to send a vessel because, Powell said, he and his companions, Len Smith and Phil Fillion, had made it safely to shore.

The three spent several hours trying to keep the boat from being pounded against the rocks but eventually gave up, got another boat and towed it in to shore.

Accident in Oxford kills Victoria artist

Funeral services will be held at McCall's at 4 p.m. Monday for a young Victoria artist killed in a traffic accident Wednesday in Oxford, England.

Heather Cragg, 26, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Cragg, 2765 Seaview, was in England to resume art studies.

A University of Oxford graduate with first-class distinction, she completed post-graduate studies in 1977 at the City and Guilds of London.

She also received two B.C. Cultural Fund advanced professional study awards.

Miss Cragg's work in oils, water colors, printmaking, and other graphic arts is included in the Art Bank, Ottawa; Vancouver Art Gallery; and Trinity College, Oxford. She exhibited in Canada, Britian and the U.S.

Polls familiar sight to Central Saanich voters

HILL · WARING · KING · GAIT · LAMONT · ARNAUD · SMITH · HANSEN

For the fifth time since last May voters in Central Saanich will trek to the polls on Saturday.

This time they will be electing a mayor and two aldermen in a byelection brought about by Mayor Jean Butler's resignation for health reasons.

The two contenders for the mayor's job are aldermen — Dave Hill and Frank Waring. As they were forced to resign their seats to enter the race, there is also an election to fill their seats on council. Six persons are vying for the two seats.

Businessman Ed Gait, housewife Leona King and engineer Robert Smith are seeking to be Hill's replacement for a one-year term ending this December.

Former alderman Ray Lamont, lawyer Flemming Hansen and homemaker co-ordinator Ruth Arnaud are competing for the other, a two-year term ending in 1981.

The candidates are facing an electorate grown weary of elections and the campaigns reflect it.

But the stakes are high as far as Hill and Waring are concerned. They are fighting hard to woo the voters.

Hill, a Saanich firefighter who has spent all his 37 years on the peninsula, is considered the man to beat.

Not only has Butler come out in support of him, but so have three other members of council — aldermen George MacFarlane, Dick Sharpe and to a lesser extent, Percy Lazarz.

Waring has only one council member in his camp — Ald. Earle Tabor.

But Waring, a 67-year-old manager of an electrical wholesale business, has a strong following, particularly in business circles. Last November he topped the polls.

The only time the two have met before in direct contest was three years ago when they both ran for regional board director. Hill won.

The styles of the two are different. Hill has youth and ambition on his side. Waring's strength is his experience in municipal politics — five years on Saanich council and four on Central Saanich — and the political contacts he has made over the years.

But Hill is still Waring's senior on Central Saanich council. He has eight years and during that time has established a reputation as a hard-working alderman with progressive ideas which he'd now like to put to practice as mayor.

Those ideas include instituting zero-based budgetting and creating a special environment committee of council.

Hill is adamant about sticking to the Community Plan which he helped draft.

The plan calls for a population limit of 14,000 by the turn of the century and Hill says the current population of 9,000 demands a strong mayor to ensure growth is controlled.

Waring is more amenable to development. He has consistently voted in favor of council considering Genstar's housing proposal in the Wallace Drive-Benvenuto area.

He believes in encouraging industry if only to broaden the tax base. He notes one mill of tax worth $35,000 last year will be worth $45,000 this year.

Waring is concerned about municipal expenditures but only alludes to how he would hold the line.

"The municipality is labor intensive," he says. "The only avenue is to try and maintain the same labor force."

The aldermanic candidates:

Ruth Arnaud, 62, is making her second bid for council. She ran in November and tied for fourth place with Ed Gait. A public health nurse, she is people-oriented. Her concerns range from Saanich Peninsula Hospital losing its obstetrics unit and raw sewage being dumped in Brentwood Bay to the lack of east-west bus service and need for more recreational facilities.

Ed Gait, 41, is a life-long resident of the municipality and manager of a rental equipment business. This is his second campaign. Gait's major focus has been on promoting the 280-acre Keating Industrial Park. He feels it is essential council try to attract more industry. He points out the Community Plan limits new housing starts to about 150 a year and the tax revenue derived is only about half the annual increases in municipal expenditures in recent years. Another source must be found, he says.

Flemming Hansen, 32, is making his first try at municipal politics although he ran as federal NDP candidate in Victoria. A graduate of the University of Victoria (political science) and the University of B.C. (law), Hansen practises civil litigation and family law in Victoria. He is interested in environment matters, especially solar energy and conservation and would press to have council set up programs and provide tax incentives to encourage installation of energy-saving systems.

Lea King, 56-year-old wife of a University of Victoria education professor, is making her third try for a seat on council. Low-keyed and somewhat self-effacing, she is lobbying for more recreation facilities for young people and the elderly. If elected she would cut through the housekeeping chores council seems to get bogged down in and concentate more on major issues. Her reason for running is simple, she says. "I like it here, and I like to work."

Ray Lamont, 61, is a veteran alderman with 19 years total experience. He was a member of the municipality's first council in 1951. Born and raised in Central Saanich — he still lives on the old homestead his father bought in 1918 — Lamont was defeated in the 1977 election. He lost by one vote. A customer services clerk with Air Canada, he feels council's role is more to watch over property than provide people's services. His aims if elected: to adhere strictly to the Community Plan and clamp down on spending.

Robert Smith, 42, a mechanical engineer at the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Pat Bay, is a newcomer to the political scene. He's lived in Central Saanich five years and has demonstrated strong interest in youth groups and recreation. He says council will have to tackle a number of highly technical problems — the Brentwood Bay sewer system and Keating Crossroad construction being just two — and feels his training would be helpful in ensuring council makes the proper decisions.

Randy Audas, practising in hospital

Escape artist almost drowns

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — Harry Houdini would have been proud of Randy Audas.

Audas, 18, blacked out while trying to imitate Houdini's trick of escaping from a sealed drum of water while handcuffed during a talent show at his high school Tuesday.

But he'll try the stunt again, Audas said from his hospital bed Wednesday, although the brush with death will make him think twice. He said he plans to make a career out of magic and the publicity of his accident won't hurt.

The Grade 13 student said he miscalculated in trying to free himself and was overcome by "a feeling of helplessness" before slipping into unconsciousness.

As parents and fellow students watched, his assistants rushed to free him after he failed to pull off the stunt in the specified time. He was quickly revived and taken to hospital.

He said two minutes "gives me time to get out of the handcuffs but not enough time to hurt myself."

Principal Kenneth Teeter said the audience was unsure whether Audas was in danger.

"Everything was done so smoothly and efficiently, many people thought it was part of the show, that they were trying to scare the audience."

Sask. budget aids elderly

REGINA (CP) — Higher taxes on cigarettes, a tax cut for old people and an increase in the tax credit for children were included in the budget presented to the Saskatchewan legislature today, the first balanced budget in four years.

Ed Tchorzewski, reading his first budget speech since becoming finance minister last summer, presented the house with $2 billion in expenditures. He also announced that last year's projected deficit of $49 million on expenditures of $1.85 billion turned out to be a deficit of $60 million.

The budget speech produced a new tax on the capital held by large corporations, $31 million in programs for native people and close to $1 billion in construction projects by Crown corporations.

Within the Heritage Fund, made up of revenue from non-renewable resources, separate divisions for energy and the environment will be created, Tchorzewski said.

The fund should have assets of $915 million by the end of the year, much of that already tied up in potash mines, an oil company and uranium mining ventures.

As a hedge against environmental disaster, the government intends to put aside $1 million for every uranium mine in Saskatchewan, begining with $2 million for the two existing mines. The money will form a contingency fund for unforeseen problems.

The elderly get an income tax cut of up to $50 each, bringing the maximum general cut they can get to $210. The income tax credit for each child was raised $10 to $50. Those measures take effect when provincial residents pay their income tax a year from this spring.

Cash offered for live babies

MONTREAL (CP) — A Montreal couple is offering pregnant women cash not to have abortions.

The couple is advertising in a local weekly, asking women who plan to have abortions to call a telephone number and be paid to change their minds.

"Unwanted babies wanted," says the ad in the News and Chronicle. "In order to save babies from death by abortion we will pay cash for every unwanted living fetus scheduled for an induced abortion. All applications treated with utmost confidence.

"This offer holds as long as the fund established for this purpose lasts."

A call to the number listed found a woman who identified herself only as Linda. She said a couple affiliated with an anti-abortion group known as Pro Life is putting up the money. She said their identity won't be released until today.

Linda said the offer requires women to "sign a contract which gives us responsibility of the fetus until it's born," with the amount of money depending on the woman's financial need.

Let us break the law: police

OTTAWA (CP) — RCMP Commissioner R. H. Simmonds called Wednesday for legislation giving police the right to break the law in pursuit of criminals.

He also told the McDonald royal commission that policemen should have access to all information about individuals collected by the government.

Simmonds, testifying for the second day before the commission investigating allegations of RCMP lawbreaking, said Mounties are sometimes constrained in their operations because they now obey the law.

Policemen are often torn between "doing what you have to do and doing what you're allowed to do if you are bound by very legalistic interpretations (of the law)," he said.

In undercover operations, policemen sometimes need to travel with false identification papers, register under false names in motels and break speed limits — all activities that are against the law, Simmonds said.

He said the government should "put in overriding legislation that says the police are not guilty of offences if they infract certain of these statutes."

Sometimes common sense dictated that policemen had to break the law.

Commissioner Guy Gilbert said Simmonds' philosophy meant "there is a class of citizens — policemen — who should use common sense under the law as opposed to all the rest of the citizens who have to obey the law, period."

Simmonds said RCMP members are so preoccupied with having to work within the law these days that a Mountie might decline to rescue a drowning man if the only lifeboat available did not have a life jacket in it. He would be afraid of breaking the law requiring persons to wear life jackets in boats.

Commission chairman David McDonald, an Alberta Supreme Court judge, rejected this logic, saying a policeman has a legal duty to act in an emergency.

"This is one more instance . . . of erecting something of a straw horse," McDonald told Simmonds.

McDonald said many RCMP witnesses have given examples of emergencies to justify requests for wider police powers, when there is already adequate authority for police actions in those situations.

In another area, Simmonds said he could not understand why policemen should not have access to all information gathered by the government, because both the government and the police have the citizen's best interests at heart.

Vancouver tops house price list

OTTAWA (CP) — Home-buyers in parts of Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary and Toronto are hardest hit by high housing prices, a recent survey by the Royal Trust Co. says.

The highest prices in the 102 areas listed were in the Kerrisdale area of Vancouver and the lowest in Chambly, Que.

Royal Trust said a typical three-bedroom detached bungalow in Kerrisdale was worth $145,000 as of Feb. 1, an increase of 34.9 per cent from the fair market value last June.

The same type house inmChambly was valued at $33,500, an increase of only three per cent in eight months.

The survey showed increases in housing prices were generally modest, except in parts of Montreal, Calgary and Vancouver. Halifax and parts of Winnipeg were among the few areas where prices were down slightly.

Rail rules ignored

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — An arbitration ruling that permitted CP Rail to reduce train crews to three from four men has reduced the thoroughness of inspections and forced crews to ignore safety regulations, a federal inquiry heard Wednesday.

William Nichol, conductor on the CP Rail freight that derailed Nov. 10 in Mississauga, told the inquiry into the accident it now is more common for crews to skip brake tests at some stations — as his crew did in Woodstock, Ont., hours before the derailment.

"You can't do everything that two men used to do," Nichol said. "We get away with breaking a few rules.

"I definitely would like a full crew."

When asked by commission counsel Robert Armstrong if the company insisted that safety rules be followed, he said: "What they don't know, don't hurt them."

Captivity blues setting in, psychiatrist says

Times News Services

NEW YORK — The 11 U.S. hostages shown in a film made by the Iranian militants appear listless, depressed and bereft of emotion — classic symptoms of long captivity — says a psychiatrist.

One hostage, Barry Rosen, complains to an Iranian Red Cross doctor in the film of "a condition where I constantly have things going wrong inside me, like my heart beating fast."

But two others, Cpl. William Gallegos and Sgt. Rodney Sickmann, both U.S. marines, smiled and seemed fit.

Virgil Sickmann of Krakow, Mo., said his 22-year-old son "looked good. He's obviously taking care of himself."

Most of the hostages, said psychiatrist Steven Paczenik, an expert on terrorism and hostages, seemed "listless, bereft of physical movement, emotional movement."

There was "an aura of . . . sadness," he told NBC News after seeing a film broadcast Wednesday.

NBC said the doctor met the hostages, now in their 131st day of captivity, to check them "a few days ago" before a possible visit by a United Nations commission. The visit was cancelled by the militants with the backing of Ayatollah Khomeini.

Meanwhile, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said today the crisis would be resolved "quite quickly" after the forthcoming elections in Iran.

Ghotbzadeh, in a radio interview broadcast in Paris, also said the UN investigating commission should have stayed longer in Tehran, because its departure Monday "gave the impression that the student (militants) had won" their battle with the government over custody of the hostages.

In other developments:

— U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance said after a meeting with UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim in New York that "the door is still open" for UN efforts to help free the hostages.

— U.S. surgeon Michael DeBakey was expected to fly to Panama see if deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's spleen needs surgery as was reported.

Carter stiffening Soviet boycott

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Carter is asking American companies to withhold voluntarily $20 million to $30 million of exports to the Soviet Union related to the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

The action, the latest in a series of economic moves in retaliation for the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, affects some 30 companies with products ranging from chewing gum and soft drinks to soccer balls and landing pits for pole vaulters.

Commerce Secretary Philip M. Klutznick is expected to telephone the chief executives of most of the companies affected urging them to honor the request. The Commerce Department said the question of whether the government should exercise its legal powers to make the action mandatory was under advisement. This could be accomplished by putting the products on a list requiring prior approval under validated licenses, as was done recently for phosphate fertilizer.

The president's first economic retaliatory action was to suspend shipments of grain and products of high technology.

The administration has widened its list of embargoed items and is seeking compliance by other industrial countries to honor the broadened list by not shipping similar products to the Soviet Union.

But in Japan, trading sources said the grain boycott has had limited effect, as other countries are supplying the Soviets, sometimes at costs 10 percent higher than the going price.

Canada and Australia continued to sign grain contracts with Moscow after Washington imposed the sanctions, the sources said. At least 7.6 million tons were earmarked for the Soviet Union.

Argentina and Brazil are charging more than 10 percent above current prices and an additional 5 million tons are about to be contracted with the Soviet Union, they said.

About 4 million tons of American grain are destined for Russia via European ports aboard Soviet-chartered freighters run by third nations, the sources said.

Meanwhile, in Britain, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher got tough today with British Olympic hopefuls on government payrolls who oppose a boycott of the Moscow Games to protest the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

The government announced that civilian government employees selected for the British Olympic squad will not get the special leaves automaticallly given in the past. The defence ministry said it will sponsor no teams of servicemen and will give no "encouragement" to Olympic athletes, meaning no special leaves and possibly an end to training time and facilities.

In what angry officials of the British Olympic Association described as a "savage blow," the foreign office withdrew from Moscow an embassy first secretary assigned to act as the British squad's liaison with the Soviets.

BP explains quadrupled oil profits

LONDON (Reuter) — British Petroleum today announced almost quadrupled net profits of $4.2 billion in 1979, boosted by rising oil prices and inflation.

BP is the second British-based oil company to announce soaring profits this month. The Anglo-Dutch Shell group earlier said it made a $7.8-billion profit in 1979.

Like Shell, BP said accounting methods of stock valuation inflated the profit figure. "This result substantially overstates the economic return achieved by the group," BP said, adding that inflation accounted for about one third of the profit rise from the previous year's net figure of $1.1 billion.

BP's share in Standard Oil of Ohio yielded $1.2 billion compared with a profit of $394 million in 1978.

P-S-S-S-T
I overheard a rumour that the family physician is selling his large country Tudor home, don't spread it around but apparently it is located on 2 acres in Metchosin and he had priced it to sell quickly at only $89,900.

DEAR FRUSTRATED:
Sorry that you must sell your character home. I know you will miss the lovely big rooms, the charming beamed ceilings, the warmth of the two fireplaces, not to mention the useful basement area, but honestly isn't your asking price of $59,900 too low?

INFLATION
A word that has recently become pronounced, take advantage of it now before it is too late by purchasing this two bedroom, no basement, side by side duplex conveniently located in James Bay for the reduced price of just $69,900.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

SANDS—VICTORIA

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path—of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

before me in the
enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Hearing Loss is not a Sign of Old Age

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who have trouble hearing has been announced by Beltone. A tiny modern hearing aid often can help. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this non-operating model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. It is not a real hearing aid, but will show you how tiny hearing help can be, and it's yours to keep free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 32391, Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Ill 60646.

Get off to right start caring for your lawn

In late winter, when weather conditions improve and growth starts, home gardeners become conscious of their areas of grass. Moss, weeds and brown spots are suddenly apparent, and a quick way of eliminating them is sought.

Moss in the grass increases as the soil becomes low in plant food. There are four species, two of which thrive in wet places, two under dry conditins.

While moss killer is a temporary relief, total elimination comes when the soil fertility is improved and able to support a good turf. Raking spreads the pieces of moss and increase the problem.

Weed in the lawn, and wild grasses, should be removed by hand while the soil is still damp and the roots easily lifted. Mark a row about one metre wide with stakes and string, remove the unwanted plants with a hand fork, pressing the loosened grass plants back firmly afterwards. A half-hour a day will soon clear the average home garden patch of grass.

Weed killers should not be applied until the day and night temperatures are above eight degs. C, and only one application a year is advised as it has been determined that frequent application cause the grass plants to deteriorate.

There are several causes of brown spots, the most common of which is walking over a grass area which is under snow, or piling snow on the grass when clearing walks and driveways. These spots will disappear in spring if the soil is fertile and the grass turf robust. Brown spots caused by diseases need careful diagnosing and application of the appropriate fungicide.

One point often forgotten is that each square metre of grass contains hundreds of individual plants which all need food and air in the root area. Regular loosening of the soil and frequent applications of fertilizer takes care of this.

After weeds have been removed, spike the area with a four or five tine garden fork at 15 cm spacings, pressing the tines about 8 cms into the soil and swinging the handle back and forth to make holes. Don't lift the sod and loosen roots.

Rub fairly dry compost through a 1.5 cm hardware cloth sieve and spread it over the grass about 1.5 cms deep. With a corn broom work this covering down between the grass blades and into the holes. Any compost left on the foliage will cause it to rot.

Follow this early treatment with a regular fertilizing schedule, using fertilizers compounded for local soil, grasses and weather conditins.

Thirty days later, in August, make another application of sulphate of ammonia and in another 30 days, around the first week in September, the final application for the season, with the complete grass fertilizer. This strengthens the grass for the coming winter.

With this minimal fertilizing program the grass will need cutting every third day, removing not more than one-half cm of foliage. If more is removed the sheltered portions of the leaves will be exposed to the sun and turn yellow.

Lime is only applied to soil that becomes too acid for grass to thrive. This never happens on the small amount of fertilizer used in a home garden. Applying lime when not needed lessens soil acidity and makes conditions ideal for weeds to take over.

Independence delay as Mugabe unready

SALISBURY (AP) — Prime Minister-designate Robert Mugabe said today that Rhodesia's independence from Britain will be delayed until the end of April.

Mugabe told a news conference his party is not ready yet to take over the reins of government from the British governor, Lord Soames.

The former guerrilla leader has repeatedly said he needs time to take over, and urged Soames to stay on, but the governor's spokesman has said this would be difficult. Soames' spokesman had indicated independence would be set for the end of this month or early April.

Meanwhile, Mugabe said his government "must proceed with speed" to resettle displaced persons and set up collective farms on unused land.

Mugabe, whose black nationalist guerrillas did most of the fighting in the seven-year guerrilla war against the government, has taken a moderate approach since his overwhelming victory in last month's elections. He has promised the economically powerful white minority that he will not confiscate white farms and that private farming will be permitted.

—He also said the government must act quickly to re-establish schools, hospitals and clinics that were closed in rural areas by the fighting that taken more than 20,000 lives.

The war was brought to an end under an agreement reached in British-sponsored peace talks. Rhodesia had been a British protectorate before it broke away in 1965 under a white-minority government. Under the London agreement, British rule was temporarily restored to carry Rhdoesia through elections for a black-majority government and transition to independence as Zimbabwe.

Legionnaire bug in Britain

CORBY, England (UPI) — Health authorities have closed the 50-room Strathclyde Hotel and are advising all 1,500 guests who stayed there in the last year to be examined for Legionnaire's disease.

They said one guest came down with the sometimes fatal disease and the germ that causes it was found in the water supply.

Legionnaires' disease is the pneumonia-like infection caused by a bacterium first identified in 1976 after 183 persons attending an American Legion convention.

Caucus wins steamroll

Times News Services

President Carter and Ronald Reagan have emerged with big victories in state precinct caucuses to add to their primary triumphs this week in three southern states.

Except for Oklahoma and Delaware, the results are still sketchy from most of the states that held caucuses Tuesday and Wednesday.

Oklahoma's Democratic caucuses, which delivered a huge 7-to-1 victory to Carter Tuesday, had complete returns showing Carter with 75 per cent to Kennedy's 10 per cent and 15 per cent uncommitted.

Carter easily defeated Kennedy in Delaware's Democratic caucuses Wednesday night. Delaware's 41 districts elected 104 delegates to the state Democratic convention committed to Carter, 40 committed to Kennedy and 29 uncommitted. California Gov. Edmund Brown received no delegates.

Carter picked up 15 unofficially pledged delegates in Hawaii precinct caucuses, while Kennedy won four.

In Washington state, with votes from fewer than half the precincts tallied, the president was leading the Massachusetts senator by better than 2-to-1 in their first test of electoral strength in the west.

Only in Alaska, which also began the delegate-selection process Tuesday, did Kennedy beat Carter, although a majority of district convention delegates were uncommitted.

The Republicans held precinct caucuses Tuesday only in Washington state, which will send 37 delegates to the Republican National Convention in Detroit in July. Reagan was leading his nearest rival, Representative John Anderson of Illinois, by a 2-1 margin.

Anderson's second-place showing was a surprise.

Meanwhile, in what may be the harshest attack anyone has made on Carter during the 1980 campaign, former president Gerald Ford said Wednesday the U.S. was in "grave peril" from Carter's ineptitude.

Speaking at the Republican House-Senate dinner in Washington, Ford said that during the 1976 campaign he had characterized Carter as "all promise and no performance" and said "he was ill-equipped and woefully innocent about Washington and the real world."

"I am sorry I said those things," Ford said, "I was much too kind."

Opening lead — king of clubs.

Assume you're in six spades and West leads the king of clubs. Certainly, when dummy comes down, you regret having undertaken such a stratospheric venture. But you can't do anything about that now, so you marshal your thoughts and try to concentrate on the business at hand.

The first problem is whether or not to take the king of clubs. Let's say you conclude that your best chance lies in ducking the king. There are two good reasons for doing so. One is that the outlook is practically hopeless if you win the king, and the other is that by refusing the trick you put yourself in a position where you have all the remaining tricks except one — which is the classic requirement for a successful squeeze.

As a result of the duck, things work out beautifully. West shifts to a heart — he can't do better — and you win with the ace, cash the ace of spades and ace of diamonds, ruff a heart in dummy, discard a club on the king of diamonds, ruff a diamond, and then play three more rounds of trumps to produce this position:

North

South

Now you lead the spade eight and West is in trouble. If he discards a diamond, you discard a club from dummy; if he discards a club, you discard a diamond from dummy. Either way, you make the slam because of your farsighted play at trick one.

SOLUTIONS FRIDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, March 14, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have more influence over events and people than might be imagined. Know it, defend principles, protect your interests. Friendship is something more — and you will learn all about it. Another Aries, a Libran and an Aquarian figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stress originality, independence, articulating needs — room can be made for you at more elevated level. Know it, be confident and direct — deal with Leo, Aquarius individuals. Emphasis on career, occupation, how you relate to one in authority.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good Moon aspect coincides with long-term arrangements, greater security, communication from afar which could lead to an educational or publishing project. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo persons figure prominently. One familiar with psychology and astrology proves a valuable ally.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be a comparison shopper — genuine bargain is available, but you must bob-and-weave in face of inflation. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals play significant roles. Accent on investments, money as it affects close associates, business partner, mate.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be aware of legal implications, contracts, rights and permissions. Aquarius, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. Maintain low profile, avoid direct confrontations, permit those close to you to express views. Plan ahead, check reservations, interest rates.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Open dialogue with co-workers, dependents. Be analytical — see places and people as they actually exist. Reject superficial explanations. Find reasons, piece together clues, hints and you will come up with complete story.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Luxury items, excitement of speculation, romance, creative endeavors dominate lively scenario. Member of opposite sex does care and will show it. Taurus, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Be receptive to fresh concepts, changes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spotlight on basic issues, security, land values and ability to define terms. Be willing to revise, review and to tear down for ultimate purpose of rebuilding on a more solid structure. Aquarius, Pisces, Virgo persons play dominent roles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Study Scorpio message for valid hint. Get off sidelines and into game. Accent on responsibility, pressure and a genuine chance to increase earning potential. Older relative could aid cause if you are flexible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Get rid of superfluous material. By so doing, you lower expenses and increase financial opportunities. Emphasis on locating lost articles, making necessary payments and collecting dividends from past efforts, investments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stress independence, originality, take initiative, lead rather than follow, make new starts in new directions. Another Aquarian and a Leo figure in scenario. Timing provides rare opportunity for success in money and love. Be confident, direct and perceptive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Get second emotional wind; regain sense of direction. Answers are found by looking behind scene. Clandestine meeting is on agenda. Cancer, Capricorn, Aquarius persons figure in scenario. Follow hunch — you could strike pay dirt.

IF MARCH 14th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, it is very difficult to hide things from you. Somehow, you sense when something of importance is about to occur. Your knowledge comes from a combination of analysis and psychic ability. You are able to do some remarkable detective work when the occasion demands. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. September could be your most significant month of 1980, a year featuring more responsibility, intensified relationships, chance for greater financial security. You could get caught up in social whirl next month.

Gacy guilty of 33 murders

Times News Services

CHICAGO — The clerk read the roll of the dead — the names of 22 youths and numbers for 11 others. "Guilty," was the verdict each time.

When the clerk finished, John Wayne Gacy stood convicted of more murders than anyone in U.S. history. All but one of his victims were strangled. The first was stabbed.

Today, the jurors who convicted Gacy on 33 counts of murder were to return to the court for a hearing on, whether the death penalty would be imposed as punishment for the sex murders.

The prosecution is demanding that Gacy die in the electric chair.

"I'll go down and pull the switch if I have to," said Harold Piest, father of Gacy's last victim.

Relatives of the young men and boys whose bodies were found under Gacy's home and in area rivers wept when the verdict was read. The jury deliberated less than two hours Wednesday before rejecting defence arguments that Gacy was not guilty by reason of insanity.

The 37-year-old remodelling contractor also was convicted of taking indecent liberties with a minor and deviate sexual assault in connection with 15-year-old Robert Piest.

The capital-punishment statute of Illinois covers crimes committed after June 21, 1977, the date it was signed into law. Twelve of the murders for which Gacy was convicted were committed after that date. Indecent liberties with a minor and deviate sexual assault also can mean a death penalty if they are committed during the course of a murder.

Gacy at one of his backyard parties

Gacy, described by prosecutors as a "predator" and "the worst of all murderers," sat expressionless, staring straight ahead, as the verdicts were read. He had confessed to committing all the murders between January, 1972, and December, 1978.

The remains of 29 victims were recovered from his property, most in the crawl space under his home. Four were found in rivers.

A dozen years ago, Gacy was a pillar of the Waterloo, Iowa, community, managing his father-in-law's fried chicken franchises and becoming chaplain of the Jaycees chapter.

After moving to Chicago, Gacy became a Democratic precinct captain and once had his picture taken with Rosalynn Carter, wife of President Carter, when she visited Chicago.

He became commissioner of streets and lighting for his township, allowing him to get a red spotlight for his car, which he used in after-midnight "cruises," posing as a policeman to pick up male hustlers.

Testimony showed Gacy liked to give parties in his back yard, inviting 200 or more guests, and delighted in dressing as a clown to entertain sick children in hospitals.

Seven saved, seven corpses

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands (Reuter) — Ships searched Atlantic waters through the night for 29 persons missing from the sunken oil tanker Maria Alejandro.

Seven survivors have been picked up from the 122,500-ton Spanish tanker, which exploded and sank 150 kilometres off Mauritania on Tuesday. Seven bodies have been found.

A survivor flown to Las Palmas said the ship sank in 40 seconds.

The cause of the explosion was not known, but Mar Oil said one theory was that gases built up in the empty tanks and exploded.

Poison runners well organized

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — With the aid and precision of organized crime, authorities say, gypsy truckers are hauling toxic chemicals from factories in the mid-Atlantic and Western states and illegally dumping the hazardous waste in the woods and farmland of northern New England.

Law-enforcement officials, citing lack of laws, shortage of trained investigators and bureaucratic apathy, say there is little they can do to stop the clandestine influx which has risen as states tighten their restrictions on the legal dumping of hazardous wastes.

Their trucks loaded with rusting, often leaky drums of solvents, cyanide solutions, pesticides and acids, the truckers operate with apparent impunity.

Phoney company names, false shipping manifests, midnight rendezvous with guides and large cash payments describe an operation that state and federal officals in New England say they are painfully aware of.

The central figure in the operation appears to be the gypsy or independent trucker who hauls cargo on a one-time or free-lance basis.

"It's clear to us that the shipping is being arranged by people with organized-crime involvement," an official said. "Everything runs too smoothly for it to be anyone else."

Light-fingered singer fined $300

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Singer Al Martino was fined $300 Wednesday for shoplifting $81 worth of shirts and socks from a department store last December.

Framingham District Court Judge Anthory DiBuono placed Martino, 52, on a year's probation, continuing the case until March 12, 1981, when the charges may be dismissed.

Shoplifting charges against Martino's friend and manager, Daniel J. DeJohn, were continued until April 16.

According to evidence presented in court, Martino had $5,000 cash with him when he was caught.

Hunger strike

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S. conservationist, arrested for cutting fishing nets to release dolphins trapped by Japanese fishermen, is in the fifth day of a hunger strike at a jail in southern Japan.

Dexter Cate, 36, of Hilo, Hawaii, has taken only water and tea since his arrest last Saturday.

PERFORMANCE

It has been our belief that a quality loudspeaker is the basis of any stereo system. Unfortunately, most people judge speakers by either their size, shape, number of components or even power handling. Here at Young's we judge speakers purely on the basis of their performance.

If you find it difficult to tell what a quality speaker should sound like, come in and we'll teach you how to listen for the qualities in any speaker system so that regardless of what you buy you'll know what you're getting.

Shown here is the Ditton 15XR—a speaker that has been produced in essence for over eleven years. A fine example of quality, performance and good value.

City homes hit in drug raids

RCMP swoop nabs 11 of 35 suspects

By DEREK SIDENIUS

An RCMP and municipal police task force of more than 50 officers hit at least 20 homes in Greater Victoria area this morning in a major crackdown on cocaine trafficking.

The task force held warrants for the arrest of 35 persons on charges of trafficking in cocaine, LSD, methamphetamine, marijuana, hashish oil and an assortment of pharmaceutical drugs.

The raids culminated a six-month undercover operation carried out by a 23-year-old RCMP constable from outside B.C.

The raids involved homes in areas ranging from Central Saanich to the Western Community and one or two Oak Bay residences.

By noon, 11 suspects had been rounded up in Victoria and five more persons — two of them Victoria residents — had been taken into custody in the Vancouver area.

The Vancouver arrests followed a curbside deal in which the undercover agent purchased a pound of cocaine worth $50,000.

But the drug when cut and sold in the underworld would increase in value to at least $100,000.

A wide variety of drugs was seized in Victoria but the kind and amount were not immediately known.

Superintendent Ed Trefry, head of the Victoria RCMP sub-division, said the operation was set up to dry up the cocaine supply in the Victoria area.

He said the trade had reached "alarming levels".

"The operation was put together after assessing the activity in this area. It was ripe for an undercover approach with the ultimate goal of drying up the supplies," Trefry said.

He said the warrants covered what he called low-level traffickers, mostly cash street dealers.

The undercover agent arrived in Victoria last October and infiltrated trafficking circles.

During the operation, he bought hashish oil, marijuana and soft drugs but his main target was cocaine.

Trefry said the undercover RCMP agent spent $22,500 buying drugs to help set up today's raids.

Trefry said the 50 officers included members of the Victoria, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich forces.

The raiding parties — split into 12 teams — gathered at RCMP headquarters about 7 a.m. today.

The raids were to have taken place at that time but there was a delay in Vancouver and they did not start until about 9.30 a.m.

The undercover officer made the large cocaine purchase on a Vancouver street about 10.30 a.m.

Trefry said the deal was to have been made in a hotel room but the suspects moved around and the buy was finally made from a car window.

The arrests were continuing today and all of the suspects are to appear in court later.

Police do not believe that the trafficking operation was part of a larger criminal organization.

"What we got is a collection of traffickers," Trefry said.

He said the arrests made today involved no problems.

"It's anticipated they will have a significant impact in this area," Trefrey told the Times.

GOING, GOING . . . The Quebec registered freighter Maurice Desgagnes rolls on her side and starts to slide under the storm-tossed Atlantic Ocean off Nova Scotia shortly after her 21 crewmembers were rescued. The seamen were taken off the ship by helicopters from the Canadian destoryer Huron. The ship had been carrying a cargo of railway ties which shifted in the storm, causing the ship to start taking water.

'To hell with the people' on camping fee hike

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

An organization of private B.C. resort and campground owners pressured the government into increasing provincial campsite fees to lessen competition, according to the editor of B.C. Outdoors.

Editor Donald Stainsby told the Times Wednesday he obtained a copy of a B.C. Motels, Resorts and Trailer Parks Association newsletter taking credit for recent provincial campsite fee increases of 25 and 50 per cent and more.

An association committee working on pricing of provincial campgrounds made a "major breakthrough" by convincing the government to raise the rates of all campgrounds, the newsletter states.

"Many of the campgrounds which were free last summer will be $5 in 1980. Also, all the $4 parks will be $5 with the remainder, about one-third of the goverment campgrounds, increased from $2 to $3," the letter says.

"This major breakthrough will assist all operators in the months to come."

It also states the government has agreed to consider collecting fees in any area where it will help neighboring private operators.

"If you have a government park nearby, be sure to let us know so we can put it on our list for the April meeting," the newsletter advises.

Lands, Parks and Housing Minister Jim Chabot and trailer park association manager Bud Carey were not available for comment at press time.

Stainsby said he is angry with Chabot for bowing to pressure groups and for misrepresenting the reason for the increase.

Higher year-round fees were announced recently by Chabot, who said they are necessary because of increased costs and will mean better service.

"It seems to me they (the motel association) finally got a minister in there who was willing to go along with them and to hell with the people," Stainsby said.

He said the increases are outrageous and not modest, as Chabot promised.

Stainsby said the minister also forgot to mention that fees would be established in a number of campsites which were free last year.

Low-cost provincial campgrounds are paid for with tax dollars, Stainsby pointed out, and provided inexpensive holidays for people, who cannot afford any other kind of vacation.

Hardest hit by the increases are old-age pensioners, single parents, low-income families, and organizations that struggle all year to take groups of underprivileged kids out camping.

Resorts and campgrounds are more expensive and owners probably asked for the fee increases because they view low-rate provincial resorts as unfair competition, Stainsby said.

"Nobody in their right minds would go to a private campground for the night.

"You're usually four feet from other campers, stuck there like pigs for dinner."

Ford wins Pinto fire case

WINAMAC, Ind. (AP) — A jury today acquitted Ford Motor Co. on three counts of reckless homicide in the deaths of three Indiana teenagers burned to death when their Pinto sedan was hit from behind.

Prosecutor Michael Cosentino and defence lawyer James Neal sat exressionless as the judge read the contents of the three envelopes containing the verdicts.

When asked if either lawyer wished to poll the panel, Cosentino replied quietly: "No your honor." Neal agreed.

The verdict was read before a packed courtroom that included more than 150 townspeople, reporters and members of the lawyers staff.

The jury's decision came in its fourth day of deliberations.

Earlier in the day, Circuit Judge Harold Staffeldt told jurors to work "until further order of the court."

The automaker was charged with three counts of reckless homicide in the 1978 deaths of three teenage women whose 1973 Pinto exploded when struck from behind by a van.

Budget boo-boo raised false hope

A budget boo-boo has dashed the hopes of some 30,000 veterans who expected an extra $50 on their homeowner grant.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis's new budget states: "The homeowner grant will be increased by a further $50, to $630, for the elderly, the handicapped now receiving GAIN and war veterans."

What it should have said was: "war veterans receiving the veterans allowance."

There are about 40,000 war veterans in B.C. who had their hopes raised.

But only 10,000 of them actually qualify.

The Veterans Services Office in the federal building on Government Street has received "a lot of calls" on the subject.

Curtis is expected to present a budget amendment in the legislature, to correct the impression that all war veterans will get the extra grant.

It will be one more thing for the opposition to be unkind about.

Merchants on edge over Maggie fallout

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria businessmen who depend heavily on the throngs of tourists brought by the Princess Marguerite every summer are starting to worry about how her replacement will affect business this year.

"It's a very distressing situation," Gerry Parker, manager of the Downtown Victoria Association, said today.

Eaton's manager Reg Hind said his department store definitely will lose business if the Queen of Prince Rupert goes on the Victoria-Seattle run as announced.

"It's bound to have an effect. We feel definitely there will be a loss because of a loss of exposure," added Hind.

"It's a concern to everybody, the entire city, especially the downtown area because we benefit directly," Mrs. Parker said.

She said downtown businessmen have heard rumors that the Rupert won't be ready by the announced May 15 startup date but so far they're only rumors.

"Whether they'll have the boat ready in time, I've heard no comments on that," Hind said.

There have been unconfirmed reports that the vessel may not be ready until mid-June or even July.

Mrs. Parker and Ed Higgin, president of the Visitors Information Centre, said Victoria businesses still don't have any hard facts from the government about the proposed schedule or carrying capacity of the Queen of Prince Rupert.

"You sort of have to feel they know what they're doing," she said.

Burrard-Yarrows shipyard, which is going to carry out the refit, said today the B.C. Ferry Corp. vessel is due to sail into drydock April 7.

The work is supposed to be finished May 12 to enable her to make her first run by May 15.

Higgin said his organization's members have a number of concerns, mostly about the carrying capacity of the new vessel and how long the schedule will allow them to stay in the city.

"Those are our concerns

Bank rate floats to 14.19

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The new Bank of Canada rate is 14.19 per cent, up from the previous rate of 14 per cent, the central bank announced today.

The rate, the first set under the bank's new floating rate system, is tied to one-quarter of one percentage point above the average interest on tenders for 91-day treasury bills. The average at today's auction was 13.94 per cent.

The bank rate, charged on loans by the central bank to chartered banks, is a signal for commercial lenders.

Meanwhile, Chase Manhattan Bank, the third largest bank in the United States, today raised its prime lending rate by a half a percentage point to a record 18¼ per cent. Other banks were expected to follow in the near future.

Bank of Canada Governor Gerald Bouey, in announcing the new floating-prime policy earlier in the week, said the Canadian dollar had been under rising pressure because of higher U.S. interest rates — which rose again just before Canada's new bank rate was announced.

The gap between U.S. and Canadian interest rates had started to cause an outflow of money from Canada to more lucrative markets, weakening the nation's currency, Bouey said.

Today's new bank rate was immediately labelled "a very serious mistake" by New Democratic finance critic Bob Rae; he termed it inflationary.

A night in Wash. jail for speedy B.C. driver

COQUITLAM (CP) — Canadian motorists who get caught speeding in Washington state may find themselves experiencing American hospitality from a new perspective.

Ian McLaine of Port Coquitlam left home on the evening of March 5, heading south for a [illegible]view in Seattle. But when the appointment time arrived, McLaine was sharing a jail cell with a convicted murderer.

McLaine was caught speeding by a state patrol officer north of Everett, but instead of being given a speeding ticket, he was charged with reckless driving — the state's most serious traffic offence short of impaired driving.

Motorists caught travelling 16 kilometres an hour over the speed limit normally are given a citation and required to post a $30 bail bond. The bail gradually increases with the amount the speed limit has been exceeded, to a high of $238 for exceeding the limit by 80 km/h an hour.

However, [illegible] driving faster than 144 km/h metres an hour usually are charged with reckless driving, which requires the driver to post $250 bail. The charge carries a maximum penalty of $500 and 60 days in jail.

McLaine said Wednesday his car won't even go 144 km/h an hour.

He said the patrolman took his driver's licence and told him he was being arrested. He was told to lock his car, frisked, handcuffed and put in the back seat of the police cruiser

McLaine said he was taken to the Everett courthouse, told to remove all his personal property, asked some questions in front of what he thought to be a lie detector and later given 15 cents [illegible] bondsman to post his $250 bond.

The bondsman refused to post the bond and McLaine asked for permission to call home, but was told he'd already used his one call.

He was asked to change into prison clothing and was put in a cell with a man who claimed to be awaiting transfer to Washington State Penitentiary at Walla Walla to serve a murder sentence.

In the morning McLaine was driven to Arlington, where he appeared in court and was fined $300 for reckless driving and given a release form allowing him two weeks to pay.

He was driven back to Everett and forced to wait another two hours before his [illegible] application was processed, he said.

"It was a really frightful experience. I think other people in Canada should be made aware of a situation like that."

Sgt. Al Beckstrom of the Everett detachment of the state patrol said most Canadians caught speeding on Interstate 5 are usually given a speeding citation, but he admitted that reckless driving charges are regularly laid for excessive speeders.

"Frequent violators of our speed limits are Canadians," he said. "They like to roll."

De Goutiere . . . watch for flaws

By PAUL MINVIELLE

The story goes that some African tribesmen, searching for highly-prized favorite garnets, were discarding any orange garnet, disdainfully calling it "malaya" — not an Asian country but the Swahili word for prostitute.

When the stones were later found to be desirable, they were naturally called malaya garnets.

Tony de Goutiere, who has been in the diamond business for 30 years and at his store in the Estevan shopping centre for 20 years, is a fund of such stories and he enjoys showing the little display case of rare stones from around the world.

The stones in the case include aquamarines, emeralds, amethysts, rubies, opals, sapphires, topazes, tourmalines . . . there are 40 different stones and each name has its own legends and traditions.

The chips in the little case carry a total retail price tag of around $50,000, which raises the subject of stones, particularly diamonds, as an investment.

Like most reputable dealers, de Goutiere is reluctant to promote diamonds as an investment, although he does think of them as portable wealth.

"They should be bought for the pleasure that comes from wearing them."

But in troubled times, few things do as good a job of moving one's wealth out of a threatened area to a safe haven as a fine diamond does.

Perhaps the only object smaller and worth a comparable amount would be a very rare stamp, but if it's going to be a rough trip, a smart bettor would put his money on diamonds.

So buy diamonds first as jewelry, and secondly as portable wealth.

How about investment?

Well, you'd have to be patient and lucky to make money quickly, but in the long run it's a safe bet fine diamond values will rise; diamond prices are 250 per cent higher than they were five years ago.

The difference between precious metals and stones, however, is that there can be huge differences in the quality of diamonds and other gems.

Gold is gold, and there can be an accurate measure of its purity, whereas diamonds have character.

Sometimes that character is flawed.

Once you start checking into the grading of diamonds, the importance of having a reputable dealer becomes self-evident.

A flawless stone is free from all internal and external blemishes or faults of every description when checked by an expert under any kind of light using special 10 power microscopes.

VVS1 and VVS2 have small (very very slight), hard-to-spot blemishes.

The top end of grades VS1, VS2, S1, S2 is where they put stones that just missed VVS.

Stones at the bottom end barely missed being graded imperfect — I1 and I2.

Then there's color, and you need special equipment to rate diamonds. In the GIA system, D is colorless. From then on, it's a matter of how much yellow there is, and the scale runs through to X. If you're going for an investment, never go below H.

De Goutiere displayed one stone, apparently colorless, with a $10,000 price tag.

The yellow became obvious on the scale and the color was rated M.

"If the color was better, it'd be worth $75,000," de Goutiere said.

"Diamond investment is a game for the wealthy. If you're investing in diamonds, you have to be ready to wait."

But there's no denying their value. Although he was unable to reveal identities, de Goutiere was called in to appraise diamonds offered as part payments in some recent real estate transactions in Victoria.

And de Goutiere says people who bought diamonds 20 years ago and bring them in for appraisal now are astounded.

He says very few people are buying diamonds as investments but there have been several phone calls asking about investment diamonds.

If you're buying a diamond, it should have a jewelry appraisal certificate from the Gemological Institute of America, De Goutiere advised, and beware of buying gems by mail (there have been several frauds).

Diamonds at bargain basement prices?

Common sense still dictates the buyer should beware. Check things out first.

civic affairs
by norman gidney

The sermon for this week is on selfishness and smallmindedness. There's a large supply of both around these days.

Over at my favorite regional district, the continuing debate about bus passes for the elderly and the larger question of how to raise the Capital Regional District's $2 million share of the 1980 transit deficit has produced deadlock, threats of mutiny and gratuitous insults for the elderly and the press. But no decision, not even a hint of consensus.

It's just one more symptom of the disease afflicting the CRD. The suburban and rural directors for the first time are wielding real political power, and they are determined to get as much as they can.

What's in it for me? That rallying cry stifled the CRD's first attempt at breathing life into the economic development commission, and if given the chance, the CRD members from the boondocks would sabotage transit as well.

They fight dirty. They wouldn't just express their distaste for a transit gas tax, then acquiesce in a majority decision. Democracy isn't good enough for them. They threatened to walk out en masse last week, which would have left the board without a quorum and unable to make any decision.

Saanich council didn't help by not sending an alternate for vacationing mayor Mel Couvelier. That lost Saanich five of its 15 votes and permitted passage of the goofy proposal for an electric bill surcharge.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said he wouldn't allow it, but such fine points don't seem to bother the CRD directors from outside the four core municipalities.

They have a single-minded hatred of a gas tax and all's fair in the war to defeat it.

A tax on electric bills has no relationship to transit at all. A gas tax is at least related to moving people from place to place.

There is a basic fairness to it. If you don't want to pay the gas tax, you ride the bus and make more room on the road for motorists. If you want to drive downtown all by yourself in your 4,000-pound automobile, you pay extra for the privilege. Your tax on gas helps subsidize the buses for others.

The CRD dissidents and disturbers talk as if they were the last of the pioneers, paying their own way and disdaining government subsidies. The ferries, for example, are considered a basic right of life in the Gulf Islands.

Who pays for them? Not the residents with their free rides from island to island and subsidized commuter rates to Vancouver Island and the mainland. British Columbians as a whole pay for the ferry system used mainly by less than one-sixth of the province's population, as our taxes help subsidize the chronically ill B.C. Rail.

The renegades out in the islands and the electoral areas depend on the metropolitan area centred on Victoria — for jobs, social services, recreation, health care — whether they like it or not.

But nobody's asking them to love us. Just use a little common sense and logic before tearing into the wicked leeches in the cities.

The provincial government calls it throwing good money after bad, but I call it false economy. First the scrapping of the Marguerite, now the promise to demolish the Glenshiel Hotel, the downtown home of 60 elderly Victorians.

The building is only worth $420,000 and it needs $500,000 in repairs, says Transport Minister Alex Fraser. Besides, the government needs it for a parking lot and all of the residents will be relocated in equivalent accommodation.

And how much will that cost? A 70-bed intermediate care home (in effect, the Glenshiel) is to be built not far away in James Bay — for $1.3 million, not including land costs. Even if the government spends more than the hotel is worth on repairs, it's saving money — not to mention the less tangible costs, such as the considerable investment in energy used to manufacture the bricks in the Glenshiel.

Surcharge decision due today

The provincial cabinet was to decide today whether to allow the Capital Regional District to impose a surtax on B.C. Hydro bills to cover a $2.2 million deficit for public transportation.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Wednesday the legislation is not clear.

"It really does not say they can't do it. It doesn't specifically prohibit them. I can't recommend it but they may have us on a technicality.

"Also, if they refuse to accept another approach, time is running out and we're in a bit of a spot."

The CRD takes over public transit on April 1.

Transit committee chairman, Mayor Norma Sealey of Sidney, said Wednesday the regional district will have to choose from alternative means of funding the deficit (a three-cent-per-gallon surtax on gasoline and diesel fuel or property taxes) if the Hydro surtax is turned down.

She agreed that Larry Miller, assistant general manager of the Urban Transit Authority, had told the CRD several times that, in the absence of a decision, the losses would automatically fall on property taxes. But she said executive director Dennis Young had said this was not so.

CRD board chairman Jim Campbell said if no decision is made the district would simply run up a deficit that would have to be paid off next year.

Meanwhile, Vancouver area residents will begin paying a 53-cent monthly surcharge on their utility bills April 1 to help pay for transit deficits — more than double what transit planners had originally expected.

Port Moody Mayor Ian Young, chairman of the Greater Vancouver Regional District's transportation committee, said the increase came after the district and the UTA determined what is needed to run the transit system they inherited from Hydro. The initial figure was 24 cents.

The utility bill surcharge is in addition to the .7 cents-a-litre tax on gasoline. Both are to pay the districts 25-per-cent share of the estimated $66 million deficit the system will incur this year.

Fishboat sinks, tug missing in sudden storm

A sudden storm Wednesday sank a fishboat and downed power lines on southern Vancouver Island, dumped snow on the upper island and is believed to have wrecked a tugboat in the Queen Charlottes.

More rain and the possibility of snow at upper levels is forecast during blustery, unsettled weather for the next few days.

Ships and aircraft are still looking for the missing tug Detour and its crew of two in Skidegate Channel area off the west coast of the Charlottes. Search and rescue authorities are withholding names of the man and woman who were aboard the 35-foot vessel.

An oil slick was spotted before dark 48 kilometres west of Queen Charlotte City. A helicopter and other aircraft from 442 Squadron, CFB Comox, the tug Medco Surf and a Coast Guard helicopter from Prince Rupert were taking part in the search today.

Victoria fisherman Gary Anderson was rescued from the Shell Islands Group by a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter from Pt. Angeles after his 40-foot vessel Western H. sank about 6 p.m. three miles east of Sidney.

He was taken from Patricia Bay airport by ambulance to Saanich Peninsula Hospital, treated for exposure and released.

The Victoria weather office said the storm struck after a confused weather pattern developed off the west coast.

Forecaster Norman Dressler said a gale warning was issued for the west coast of V.I. and Georgia Strait Wednesday morning. With later weather information, the warning was dropped, but when a satellite photo of Pacific weather conditions was received, the warning was restored at 12:30 p.m. for the west coast, and at 3:30 p.m. for Georgia Strait.

The storm struck about 4 p.m on lower Vancouver Island and 15 minutes later electric power was cut by falling branches, trees and poles in a number of areas in the capital region.

In the 24 hours to 4 a.m. a total of 14.4 mm of rain was recorded here, driven by winds gusting up to 53 knots at 4:04 p.m. and 5:30 a.m.

Above 2,000 feet it snowed several inches, and at Campbell River 11 cm of wet snow was measured early this morning.

Dressler said overnight temperatures would drop to the 0-2 degrees range, depending on altitude, rising Friday to a range of 5-7 degrees, with mixed cloud, shower and winds from the southeast, but not as strong as Wednesday.

Residents of the Glen Lake-Metchosin area lost power from 4:15 to 7 p.m. when a major line came down at Happy Valley and Broadview.

Smaller or intermittent power failures were scattered throughout the area, some affecting only a few houses, others blacking out neighborhoods in Gordon Head, North Saanich, Wilkinson, Lochside, Otter Point and Sooke River areas.

How to beat criminals

The Victoria Times has joined the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce and Victoria area police departments in sponsoring a crime prevention seminar here next month.

The seminar, similar to the successful one put on last year under chamber sponsorship, is designed to give businessmen tips on protecting themselves against crime.

There will be displays, audio-visual presentations and guest speakers from private industry and police departments discussing shoplifting, bad cheques, frauds, employee theft and breaking and entering.

Five sessions will be held over three days — April 14-16 — at Laurel Point Inn.

Two are scheduled for the mornings — 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. on April 15 and 16.

The other three are evening sessions from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.

The longer evening sessions will include discussion on employee theft.

A highlight will be a talk by reformed bank robber Ray Johnson at the opening session at 7:30 p.m. April 14.

The seminar costs $15 per business for a maximum of five employees plus $2 for each additional employee attending.

Registration forms are being accepted by the Chamber of Commerce, 1020 Government.

Yes vote possible in Quebec in June . . . but that's it

By MIKE HUGHES

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque has a reasonable chance of getting a "yes" vote in the June referendum, David Johnston, principal of McGill University, said Wednesday.

However, that referendum will only allow his Parti Quebecois government to begin negotiations on special status for the province in relation to the rest of Canada, he said in an interview.

It will take a second referendum to decide any final action by Quebec.

Johnston said he feels the majority of Quebecers won't object to negotiations on the general subject of special status but when it comes to the crunch there will be no majority vote for any form of separation.

"My reading is that the majority of Quebecers aren't hostile to the rest of Canada.

"The majority of Quebecers probably want different constitutional arrangements so as to place more government responsibility at the provincial and local level."

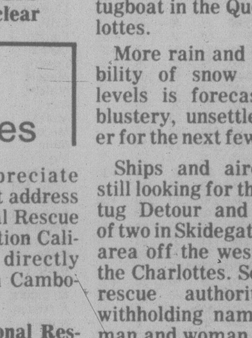
This sentiment is not exclusive to Quebec, Johnston said, but prevelant in Newfoundland now with the offshore oil discoveries, in Alberta and also to a certain extent in B.C.

Johnston, 38, was guest speaker Wednesday night at the annual Victoria Bar Association lecture in the University of Victoria senate chamber.

When appointed principal of McGill last September, he was the youngest university principal in the country.

McGill is an English university in Montreal with an enrolment of 18,000 full-time students and 15,000 part-time.

Prior to the McGill appointment Johnston was dean and professor in the law faculty at the University of Western Ontario. He served as a member of the Ontario Securities Commission for seven years to 1979 and helped draft the Ontario Securities Act in 1978.



JOHNSTON
. . . most aren't hostile

He was the moderator of the television debate between Pierre Trudeau, Joe Clark and Ed Broadbent during the May, 1979 federal election campaign.

He said he is concerned about the political division in the country that was illustrated in the last two federal elections.

Johnston said he is not in favor of any kind of proportional representation system although possibly a a refashioned Senate with representatives from each province might help.

"The problem is a consequence of democracy and something that we are going to have to recognize and wrestle with.

"It is going to require a greater effort from the national parties to be truly representative of national interests. The conservatives have got to solve the problem of their representation in Quebec and the Liberal government has got to acquire a better understanding of the aspirations of western Canada and attempt to meet those aspirations."

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market fell sharply in active mid-afternoon trading today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said Wednesday's trading halt in shares of Hugh Russel Inc. was continued pending a statement by the company. Class A shares last traded at $17⅜ and class B shares at $12⅛.

Hugh Russel announced Wednesday that an unidentified party has made a takeover bid for the company at a higher prices than the $18 a share offered March 3 by First Commerce Financial Corp. of Vancouver.

Among industrials, Gulf Canada lost 4½ to $165, Dome Petroleum 3¼ to $68¾, Falconbridge Nickel A 3 to $120, Nowsco Well Service 2¼ to $50¾ and Bow Valley Industries 1½ to $49½.

Tru-Wall Group was up 35 cents to $1.10, Alberta Energy Co. ⅞ to $51, Allarco Development 1 to $77, Bomac Batten A ¼ to $8 and Canada Malting Co. ⅜ to $30¾.

Dome Mines dropped 2 to $71, Rio Algom 1½ to $33½ and United Keno Hill 1⅜ to $41⅛. Dominion Explorers gained five cents to $1.06.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were down in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 10:51 a.m. PST was 3,318,639 shares.

Of the stocks that traded, 147 advanced, 208 declined and 141 remained unchanged.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, dropping .07 to $7.55 on 19,042 shares and Grouse Mountain remained unchanged at .70 on 10,250. Taro Industries dropped ¼ to $5½ on 3,100 and Proflex Ltd. gained .02 to .30 on 2,500. Northway Gestalt remained unchanged at $2.00 and Balco Industries advanced ⅛ to $6⅛.

On the resource and development board, United MacFie Mines gained .30 to $3.55 on 146,850 shares and Banner Resources rose .05 to $4.15 on 59,800. Avino Mines Ltd. dropped .35 to $3.00 on 57,300 and Laredo Petroleum gained .15 to $2.15 on 34,750. Quinstar Oil Corp. declined .05 to $2.80 and North South Resources dropped .20 to $5.10.

Granger Resources Corp. advanced .07 to .69 on 25,500 and Hoko Explorations remained unchanged at $1.35 on 25,000. Corvette Petroleum gained .20 to $1.50 and Beach Gold Mines dropped .14 to $1.00.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost ground in an erratic session as some leading banks raised their prime lending rates to record highs of 18¼ per cent.

The market drifted aimlessly this morning as traders continued to await President Carter's possible actions in response to the recent surge in the inflation rate.

But then prices began slumping as Chase Manhattan Bank of New York raised its prime rate to 18¼ from 17¾ per cent.

Several other large banks in Chicago and California quickly joined Chase at that level.

Oil stocks posted some of the largest declines. Texaco dropped 1⅛ to $36⅝, Mobil 1½ to $76⅝, Phillips Petroleum 1⅝ to $50½, and Gulf Oil 1⅜ to $45½.

Honeywell fell 2½ to $84½ on top of a 2¾-point drop Wednesday.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was mixed near the close of quiet trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 447.0, up 2.1.
